Full Spectrum of Options

As the countless leaves of autumn showed a full spectrum of color, the myriad of activities, academics, and athletics represented a full spectrum of options for an enthusiastic, involved student body. The year brought about some major changes including more sports, new staff members, and the controversial closed campus policy.

The new sports included soccer, freshman track, freshman women's basketball, freshman volleyball, freshman wrestling, and freshman softball. The new sports gave more students opportunities to participate.

The addition of six teachers reduced class sizes and added class choices to enhance the already diverse curriculum. College preparatory classes gave students a chance to take on an accelerated work load, while advanced placement classes in American History, POD, English, Biology, and Calculus allowed students the opportunity to earn college credits while still in high school.

A Spectrum of Winners

In 1993, Port Huron Northern had to change their address from Port Huron to Fort Gratiot. Being annexed to the city of Port Huron allowed for a new gymnasium, tennis courts, and other improvements on the road in front of the building in coming years.

From an award winning band, national VICA winners in the electronic field, outstanding AP test scores, to award winning yearbooks, Northern's academic program is second to none. The variety of achievements reveals excellence throughout the curriculum—a full spectrum of winners.

The school board put the closed campus policy into effect for the protection of the students. In previous years, the school allowed students to walk to local restaurants during their lunch hour, but when the school board put this policy into effect, it required students to stay on school grounds during the lunch hours. The school gave students the opportunity to buy McDonald's, Taco Bell, and Pizza Hut in the cafeteria.

After all the changes were made, the result was a successful and more productive school year.

Shades Of Spirit

To students, the school year seemed like a mountain of non-stop work. Although school work occupied the greatest amount of time, students still found hours for fun and relaxation. "Even with all of my school work and my job, I still had time to do the things I enjoy, like running and swimming," said Bryan Garrett ('95).

Events such as Snow Extravaganza, Spring Break, and Mardi Gras made it tough for students to prioritize their time. These events were a great way to take a break from their normal routines and have some fun.

Jobs also added confusion to the already hectic schedules that most students had. Students needed to make money to make car payments, save up for college, or to buy gifts for their girlfriend or boyfriend.

The full spectrum of activities occurring throughout the school year challenged students to budget their time and show responsibility. Even though they had busy lives outside of the classroom, students still remembered that their education came first.

SKIS

Has A Photo Finish

Snow was the name. Spirit was the game. Underclassmen and seniors alike gathered on March 14 through 19 for the annual Snow Extravaganza. "This was the one chance out of the year that I got to go to school in my comfortable old PJ's and nobody gave me any funny looks . . . well almost nobody," said Dawn Masters ('96). Get Up and Go Day was part of a whole week during which students were invited to wear the unusual to represent each designated day. Those days were Concert T-Shirt Day, Get Up and Go Day, College/Pro Sports Day, Western Day, and Blue and Gold Day.

The games assembly, another important part of the Snow events, consisted of games like Turkey Bowling, Pin the Heart on the Administrator, and Snowblowers. The audience was fully aware that only the brave-hearted would dare to risk injury and total humiliation for their own class. "To be honest, I don't know if I'd have the guts to get out there and risk my dignity like they (the participants) are doing," said Tiffany Datema ('96).

Competitions like the Snowblower were tough ones, most agree. The participants teamed up in pairs, with one partner blowing a piece of cotton while walking on his or her hands across the gym floor, as the other competitor held their wriggling legs. Turkey Bowling resembled a normal bowling tournament, except the bowling ball was replaced by a frozen game hen. Pin the Heart on the Administrator was a prospective source of revenge for competitors, who were to tack a paper heart onto cardboard cutouts of Mr. Goldsworthy, Mr. Burnell, Mr. Chapman, and Mr. Crittenden—blindfolded. Strange? Maybe. Challenging? Definitely.

The seniors triumphed over the underclassmen in the games assembly events as well as in volleyball, the mini-floats, and the informal football games held on March 19. Brian Murphy ('94) joined Natalie Helwig ('94), Mardi Gras queen, in the ranks of royalty as she crowned him Snow King at the assembly.

The last event of Snow was the dance, which took place at seven and rocked Northern until eleven that evening. Although not as populated as was anticipated, the dance was a success, and as Dan Alonso ('94) announced the seniors had virtually cleaned house in the events of the Snow Extravaganza, the cafeteria erupted in cheers.

The Snow Extravaganza was an exciting change of pace from the routine of the school year. While providing a welcomed break, it also marked the beginning of spring, an even more welcomed change.

Breaking Through The ICE

After A Long Winter

Long, lazy days of soaking up rays, catching waves, skiing the slopes, or just relaxing at home made up the enticing day dreams that filled the minds of students in the days before Spring Break. The final bell of the school day set them free for a week of time on their own.

Top vacation places included such hot spots as Florida, Arizona, Hawaii, and the Bahamas. Many headed south to a warmer climate in order to begin their spring fling in the sand. "My friends and I had a blast at Panama City Beach. Both the scenery and the weather were absolutely gorgeous," said Maria Cohrs ('95). Getting a head start on summer tans, playing volleyball, swimming, partying with friends, or just buying souvenirs defined Spring Break.

On the other hand, some searched for cold weather. In their pursuit of fresh snow, they bundled up in heavy clothing and headed to the slopes for a wild time in the powder. The ski club spent their break in Breckenridge, Colorado. The trip, organized by sponsor Dr. Bill Kreis, lasted five days, from Monday to Friday. After leaving early in the morning, vacationers took a two hour plane ride and an hour-long bus ride into the mountains in order to reach their destination. Skiers tested their abilities in exceptional conditions at Breckenridge, Keystone, Copper Mountain, and Arapahoe Basin. "It was a lot of fun since we got three feet of snow in one week. The extra snow made it great for skiing."

said Maggie Bales ('95). The excursion to real alpine skiing areas was an exciting change from the usual trips to areas in Michigan.

Meanwhile, some stayed home in the snow and sunshine, having just as much fun. Some played basketball, hung out with their friends, or even washed their cars. Just the usual, everyday kind of fun, relaxing and enjoying every minute of the day without worrying about any homework or tests. "Even though I stayed home for Spring Break, I had a lot of fun. I spent time with my friends and family, which I hardly get to do during school. If only it could have lasted two weeks!" said Jenny Rogers ('97).

Spring Break was the main stress reliever that students looked forward to because it helped slow down the usual schedule and enabled them to put off dealing with the huge pile of text books and papers. Some vacationers came back burned and others returned exhausted from a week on the slopes, but all fondly remembered the unforgettable experiences that they had.

Vacationers replaced daydreams with reality as school bells rang and the end of the year time crunch welcomed them back.

Students Show Their TALENT

During The Performance

Lights! camera! action! The backstage crew raised the curtain and the show began. Anxiously waiting to make their onstage debut; actors and actresses, some amateurs and others veterans, scurried around backstage putting on last minute touches of make-up and hoping for the show to go perfectly as planned.

Everyone sensed the buzz of excitement as the lights dimmed and the stage helpers illuminated the floor with colored lights. Standing on the deck of his ship, Captain Orton (Phillip Schmuck '96) pointed in the direction of Siam, as Louis (Tim Troy) as his mother Miss Anna (Jolene Vettese '95) looked on.

The King of Siam (Robert London '94) and all the inhabitants of his royal palace nervously awaited Miss Anna's arrival. She had come from England to teach the King's 36 children and wives the English language and customs. The King chose Lady Thiang to assist Miss Anna in teaching the children and in helping the wives develop more lady-like habits.

The actors brought many interesting characters to life during the production, such as the forbidden lovers Tuptim (Katherine Rabaut '94), a gift to the King from the neighboring country of Burma, and Luntha (Lon Coronado '95), who delivered her. They fell in love on this journey to the palace of Siam, but could not express their feelings before the King. Kralahome (Eric Prause '96), Royal Advisor to the King and commander over the slaves of the palace, added humor to the dialogue of the performance.

Many of the aspiring actors and actresses joined the musical from elementary schools in the Port Huron Area School District. These younger players gained experience and knowledge through the guidance of the directors and cast.

Director Mrs. Carolee Dowd, Assistant Director Neill MacLeod Hunter ('93), and Producer Kaylene Robbins, along with the crew members spent hours of after-school time coordinating the finer points of the play and preparing costumes. "I had a great time with this, and I think everyone involved was pleased with the way it turned out," said Vettese. The final performances for the public took place on April 22, 23, and 24 at the SC4 Fine Arts Theater.

This presentation of Rodger's and Hammerstein's "The King and I" was a smashing success, with four performances and 3 standing ovations. "I enjoyed the acting and the musical solos. Jolene did a fantastic job as Miss Anna," said Sara Whitaker ('96).

A Memorable NIGHT Never To Be Forgotten

"You can hardly recognize the kids when they're all dressed up like that," said faculty member Connie Kreh. This comment was very true. Elegant evening dresses and tuxedos replaced the usual items like jeans, t-shirts, flannels, and tennis shoes.

Enormous stretch limos, horse drawn carriages, and some less elaborate forms of transportation (private cars) delivered the transformed promgoers from elaborate dinners to a night of memory making at the actual prom.

Months of preparation went into the much anticipated prom nights. Both juniors and seniors were in local stores obtaining the perfect attire for the special night. Searching for the best dress or an affordable, fitting tuxedo gave some a problem. Cost and availability were concerns in the long quest for the perfect ensemble. Others had to take hair and fingernail appointments far in advance to achieve a glamorous style for the long awaited evening.

Decorations pertaining to the theme "We've Got Tonight," chosen by the class of '95, dazzled the eyes as seniors arrived at the Thomas Edison Inn on June 3, 1994, for their special night. Ushers greeted students at the door and led the way to the festive dance floor. Those who attended received souvenir keychains and picture frames, to assure a lasting memory.

Later in the evening couples strolled along the boardwalk, taking in the beautiful nighttime view of the St. Clair River and the sparkling skyline of the city of Sarnia. "Senior Prom was really fun. I'm glad I went because it was such a good experience. It was a night I will never forget because it was one of the last times I saw all of my friends together and one of the best times of my life," said Annie Schultz ('94).

On April 30, 1994, members of the junior class flooded through the doors into the Harrington Inn's ballroom. Their theme, "Almost Paradise," set a magical mood for their night of fun and memories. Although there were a few complaints about the lack of space and the choices of music made by the deejay, general opinion of the junior prom was positive. Those who attended it liked the setting of the Harrington Inn and had a good time preparing themselves for the big night. "It was kind of crowded on the dance floor, in the whole room really, but it was really fun. Although the evening was pretty expensive, I enjoyed it and the pictures turned out great," said Kim Lawrence ('95).

Both proms left the students with some happy memories of their friends and their school. All remembered the proms as memorable times in their years as upperclassmen.

But Remembering The Past

As Mr. Scott Teeple struck up the band, the seniors marched to the song, Pomp and Circumstance.

A shimmer of neatly ironed blue and gold gowns filled the floor at McMorran Place as seniors filed into their seats.

Mr. Goldworthy took the podium and delivered a speech commending the seniors on a successful journey through high school. Then, Superintendent, Mr. Larry Moeller stepped up to congratulate the seniors as well.

A rush of feelings and memories brought on tears as Cory Moretz ('94) began his memorable performance of "This is the Time," by Billy Joel.

Afterward, co-valedictorians Amy Beecroft and Eric Osborn gave speeches about how they must go on and remember everything they have learned.

Theresa Papineau, the salutatorian, shared with the class a speech about her memories of the past four years.

Feelings of sorrow for the people they were leaving behind, happiness for everything they had accomplished and excitement for what lay ahead were the thoughts of most seniors as they awaited the calling of the names.

There was a favorite moment for every senior, but for senior Christine Stein, it was when Mr. Goldworthy presented the seniors as the "Class of '94". "It was a major adrenaline rush for me," she said.

After turning their tassels, the graduating class threw confetti, toilet paper, silly string, and beach balls. After 13 years of school and three days of two hour practices, it was over. It was finally over.

Warm Weather Brings ACTION And Summer Fun

“School’s out for summer” was the thought on every student’s mind when the bell rang on June 10. Partying, lying on the beach, hanging out with friends, working, and going on vacation to other places, were only some of the things students did over the summer.

“Over the summer I mainly hung out with my friends, went to parties, and worked at Hot N’ Now,” said Denny Parmann (’96). For many teachers summer was a time for hassle-free days without students forgetting when homework was due, or claiming that they had never heard about the assignment. It gave many of them a chance to relax and get the things done that they could not do because of grading tests, writing out progress reports, calling parents, or just plain relaxing from a hectic day. The week gave them a chance to catch up.

While some students chose to spend their summer vacation here in Port Huron others chose to spend it elsewhere. Many went to Florida, some to Europe, some to California, and still others chose to go other places around the U.S. and the world. “I went to Sea World and Cedar Point. For the rest of the summer, I hung out with my friends and babysat,” Jessica Gourlay (’96).

Working took up most summer time. Some worked in a restaurant either cooking, serving, or cleaning. Others worked outside, at the mall, at clothing stores, or some just did odd jobs. A few chose to work through the school’s JTPA.

The temperature during summer played a major role when it came to students planning their activities. In June the temperature was warm, and a little muggy; so students spent a lot of their time at the beach and at the pool, which gave them a chance to work on their tans and brush up on the waterskiing and volleyball skills. In July the temperature started to cool down; making it more comfortable to get outside and have fun without having to worry about keeping cool. Students got a chance to hang out with friends outside. In August the temperature dropped; calling for sweatshirts and pants, which was an advantage for students who participated in outdoor activities like the Gus Macker.

Many people anxiously awaited the arrival of events such as boat night, cruise night, and the carnival. For some who went to these types of events it was the only time to see friends that they had not seen since school ended. Some competed in the Macker and in the Francis J. Robinson Memorial Tennis Tournament, playing singles, doubles, or mixed doubles, and improving their skills. For others it was just a time to take a break from work.

Classes Show VARIETY In Spirit

What an exciting time! A week of dressing up, bringing in pennies for the class penny jars, working on the walls and finally at the end of the week—the Games Assembly. The games assembly decided which class had the most school spirit.

Spirit week began with the ever popular “Get up and Go” day, when students came as they were when they woke up. “My favorite dress up day during spirit week was “Get up and Go” day because I didn’t have to get all spiffed up,” said Nicole Collins ('96).

On “Era” day, a new dress up day for this school year, students dressed up in clothes to represent their favorite time period. Some students dressed up as flower children, others in poodle skirts, and some even came draped in togas. Those were just a few of the costumes seen.

By Wednesday, it was time to wear the best boxers and the most happening hats with crazy socks and neckties. Students wore everything from ties with lips on them to boxers with tweety bird to socks that played music.

Thursday, students went back to the basics in concert T-shirts and flannel shirts for “Grunge” day. Many students chose to wear both the flannel shirt and the concert T-shirt.

On Friday, students showed their true school spirit by decorating themselves in blue and gold. Colored hair and painted faces turned heads wherever they went. Some students’ hair color mixed giving them a green look. But some students decided to show their spirit by sticking to the basics and just wearing school sweatshirts.

At the end of the week, the Games Assembly proved to be a battle from start to finish. Classes participated in many different activities like “The Blind Mice Race” or the ever popular “Tug of War.” Classes also competed for the “Pep Bone” by showing the most school spirit and cheering on their classmates. After the points of the games assembly were added up the juniors came out on top; the seniors second; the sophomores third; and the freshmen fourth.

All of the events of Spirit Week added up to who had the most school spirit. The winner, after all was tallied up, would receive the barrel. The results had the juniors in an uproar with the seniors winning by two points.

Also during the week, Student Council gave out purple ribbons to show support for anti-violence month. Many students and staff expressed their support also by wearing the purple ribbons on their shirts and/or tying them onto the antenna of their car. “The anti-violence purple ribbons was the best thing about spirit week to me,” said Jenny McDonald ('95).

At the end of spirit week all students knew it would be a lasting memory of fun and excitement. Mardi Gras has been a tradition upheld for many years and would be for many years to come.

The Queen Is CROWNED With Honor And Tradition

A competition from start to finish best described the attitude between the classes during the week of Mardi Gras '94. At the end of the week, students from every class had a chance to demonstrate all of the accumulated spirit that had come from participating in Spirit Week. Students cheered their team to a much deserved victory at the homecoming game against Eisenhower.

Each class tried to show more spirit than the other by yelling louder, wearing more of the school colors, blue and gold, or by just encouraging the team with the better and louder cheers. In the end, the classes worked toward the same goal, winning the homecoming game.

The night was packed with enthusiasm, teamwork, and competition between both the schools and the classes. Students showed their team spirit any way they could. Some went so far as to paint their entire face and hair blue and gold. Others showed a little less enthusiasm by just wearing the school colors and cheering for the varsity football team.

By halftime the Huskies had a strong lead, but the action was nowhere close to being over—many plays to finish more tackles and touchdowns to make, more spirit to show.

During halftime, representatives from each class, hoping the carts were made strong enough to survive the race, pushed home-made carts across the football field and then back again. The seniors pushed forward at the last second passing the sophomore class and

Later during halftime, the Mardi Gras Queen's Court came onto the field. Driven in classy convertibles donated for the evening by community members, the court appeared on the field in style. After exiting the convertibles, their fathers assisted the court members to the center of the field. Natalie Helwig, the 1993 Mardi Gras queen crowned LeaAnn Witzke. The crowning was a very special moment for all involved. Just being on the court was an honor many girls would be proud to have. "When LeaAnn was crowned, I was really excited, because it was great to see her so happy. All three of us are really good friends, so we felt great for her," said Lara Porter ('95).

The action in the second half of the game was just as exciting, if not more than the first. The cheerleaders pumped up the crowd and the team. The final result was Northern triumphant with a 25-0 win over a ranked team! The stands went crazy with excitement. "The highlight of the evening was when we won," said Shane Charles ('95).

The Claim To FAME

Lies In Competition

After a week of wall building, putting together class carts for the cart race at half time, dressing up for unique spirit week days and participating in many different activities at the Games Assembly, at last the Mardi Gras dance arrived. At 7:00 p.m. students poured into the doors, anxious to know the final results of Spirit Week '94 and ready for a fantastic evening of memories and fun.

Dancing couples, groups of friends, decorations, a relaxed atmosphere, and a fantastic music selection made the Mardi Gras dance an unforgettable time. Students came for a variety of reasons ranging from just coming to hang out with friends, seeing who came to the dance, and coming to see which class won the '94 Mardi Gras Spirit Week. "Most students went to the dance to hang out with their friends and to go out with them afterwards," said Jessica Gensiewski ('97).

A sudden pause in the excitement indicated it was time for the results of Spirit Week. Members of every class stood anxiously awaiting the results. Everyone sensed the tension between the juniors and the seniors because of the closeness of points. The Juniors earned first place for their artistic "Phantom of the Opera" wall. The Seniors placed second with a re-creation of "A Teenager's Bedroom." The Sophomores captured third place by using professional looking posters on their wall to make a replica of "A Broadway Theater." The Freshmen received fourth place for their wall that was dedicated to "The Doors."

Spirit Week encouraged a tight competition between the juniors and the seniors, but in the end, the seniors won the barrel by two points. Outraged, some members of the junior class gathered and sat down in the middle of the cafeteria, chanting repetitive cries of disapproval. After a few moments the dance returned to normal with plenty of dancing and fun. For the seniors, winning the barrel was a great honor. "The coolest part of the dance occurred when the seniors won the barrel," said Matt Hunwick ('95).

The second part of the evening proved to be exhilarating and wild with students dancing and talking with each other. Many students took the time to ask that special person for a dance or to finally get involved with the group dancing going on all around them. Some even had a dance competition among themselves. By 11:00 p.m. the excited chatter of students praising the dance was heard as they headed out into the night ending another Mardi Gras.

The Jaws of LIFE

Sends Serious Message

The morning announcements each day invited the curiosity of everyone as Kacey Coughlin ('94) and Ryan Relken ('94) prepared the students for an assembly that would shake the school.

"Be someone you can count on. Friends are for life." This was the idea on students minds as they stood behind yellow police tape on the baseball diamond, watching their breath while waiting for the "Jaws of Life" presentation to begin. Sirens blared and lights flashed as the Fort Gratiot Fire Department operated the life-saving machine that has extracted hundreds from crashed vehicles. "It was amazing how much work goes into rescuing crash victims. It's just unbelievable," said Laura Green ('97).

Following the outdoor demonstration, the crowd herded into the gymnasium, where Linda Barker from AAA of Michigan delivered a speech and presented the Fort Gratiot Fire Department with a check of over seventeen thousand dollars. AAA sponsored a showing of filmstrips of past accidents resulting from drunk driving. "First you take a drink, then the drink takes a drink, and then that drink takes you," said Joe Danna, officer in charge of the DARE program.

Gail Goodwin spoke of her daughter Candy's death due to a drunk driving accident with her boyfriend while showing pictures of Candy and of the accident. A hush fell over the entire gymnasium as she told the story of an all too familiar scene for some high-school students: a party where drinking was involved, and a driver that thought he was under control. Goodwin's speech hit home for many students, especially when she announced that May 6, the day of the assembly, was Candy's birthday. Adding to the lessons learned and the seriousness of the topic, one police officer read an especially moving poem written by a fifth grader named Misty Pelc from Roosevelt Elementary School. "The assembly was a good chance for students to hear about drunk driving," said Steve Williams ('95).

Following Goodwin's speech, John Eastman ('94) and Brian Murphy ('94) simulated being pulled over in a drunk driving situation. With the assistance of an actual police officer, both showed what happens in the process by taking tests of both their motor skills and reflexes. A round of applause from the crowd was all that kept the stumbling Murphy from "going to jail." The timing for this assembly was really good, especially with prom and graduation coming up," said Eastman ('94).

Undoubtedly, the assembly left students deep in thought about drinking and driving as they filtered out of the gym and back into classrooms.

Center Of The Spectrum

Individuality makes everyone special. Northern reflects a full spectrum of individuality. The students and their attitudes made the school what it is.

Although each person is special as an individual, when all put together a whole new bond is formed. At a pep assembly, for example, the entire student body banded together and supported all of the athletes in fall sports. The "family" attitude made everyone who represented the school in any way feel like they were not alone, but they had someone standing behind them. "I was relieved to realize how helpful everyone was when I got here," said Anne Gradl ('95), exchange student from Germany.

This family attitude makes Northern unique. The full spectrum of individuality and togetherness makes Port Huron Northern special.

"I was relieved to realize how helpful everyone was when I got here."

A SPEC- TRUM OF SENIORS

On September 20th in the cool air with the sun slowly rising over the water at Lakeside Park, the class of 1995 huddled together.

On the unstable bleachers they felt a sense of togetherness. Their characters and minds had grown and become colorful. They have many challenges to face individually but they defeated many obstacles together. Any Senior knows that wall building represents a major hurdle and that Mardi Gras and Snow games take team effort.

"One. Two. Three. Click!" The last picture was snapped and the graduating class walked away from the scene of a photographic memory to jam the Lakeside parking lot and return to school.

LEADERS

Those Who Hold Tomorrow's Future

Mardi Gras, Snow Extravaganza, and many other class sponsored functions were coordinated and directed by the members of the senior class with the most initiative, the class officers.

President Jerry Ellsworth, vice-president Eric Bert, secretary Lara Porter, and treasurer Keeley Carson gave their all to the fund raisers, walls, and showcases put together in their senior year.

Taking the position of an officer required effort above and beyond what was expected of the representatives. Officers arrived at meetings earlier, and led the discussions of many of the issues that faced the class.

Dealing with the decisions of such things as the location of the senior picture and what the class motto and song would be took a lot out of these students. "Being an officer takes so much time, but it really is a lot of fun," said Lara Porter ('95). Together the officers worked as a team to produce a better learning environment. "We do not change the rules or anything, we only plan activities," said Eric Bert.

Found In The Mardi Gras Queens

From nominations to election of the representatives, the queen's court activities for the senior ladies were the most special and meaningful of all.

Finally the year had come when one representative would be crowned as queen. At half-time, Lara Porter, LeaAnn Witzke, and Keeley Carson rode atop sporty convertibles toward their waiting escorts. Upon reaching the fifty yard line, Kari Hall ('96) gave each girl a rose and the representatives took their places on the field.

Excitement rose as the moment of crowning the Mardi Gras Queen drew closer. When Tiffany Stevens announced that the new Mardi Gras queen was LeaAnn Witzke, the crowd broke into applause. "I guess it's nice to know that people think enough about you to nominate you," she said with a smile on her face after the announcement. Though all of the girls could not leave as the Mardi Gras Queen, their evening was still extremely special and something they would never forget. "It made me feel really good—I realized I have a lot more friends than I thought," said Lara Porter. Underclass representatives thought about the day when they would have the chance to be Queen.

LOCK UP

Life Within School

Tumultuous and revolutionary described the changes made in the lives of students. The most noted change was the introduction of a closed campus. "Closed campus came about because of concern from the parents, students, and the community regarding safety. It's not that we don't trust the kids, it's the outsiders that we don't trust," said principal Jim Goldsworthy.

The decision to close campus was not a problem for most students. "It doesn't matter to me. A half hour isn't that much time," said Ollie Mitchell ('95).

Not being able to leave greatly disturbed others. "It's understandable that the school should be responsible for the students, but I feel that we're being stripped of our rights," said Adam Lord ('95).

Faculty opinion of the closed campus was more supportive. "This rule makes it much easier on school security and administrators to keep outsiders off the campus. Anything that will protect our students and preserve their safe learning environment is a positive step," said teacher Al Wright.

COLLAGE

Showing Off A Sense Of Personality

Locker decoration reflected creativity in numerous ways. A closer look into any locker, and one was certain to find clues to its inhabitants. Some chose a sporty theme, others went artistic.

Ambitious decorators searched for great pictures all year long to create the perfect locker in order to mirror their personality. Piece by piece, their lockers became a source of pride. Whether they used ads, photographs, or magazine articles, students were themselves with a more unique locker.

To the majority of students, decorating their lockers was a way to integrate their out of school life into school. Bringing in posters or other papers brightened the insides of the dull metal storage spaces.

As fun as decorating a locker was, some felt it unnecessary and opted for the simple look. "Lockers are cluttered enough to begin with, why bother to clutter them any more with decorations," said Lisa VanBeek ('95).

In their own way, students did their best to make their lockers more bearable for the duration of the year.

SLEEP

Catching Up From The Long Night

Heavy eyes, a drooping head, and the irresistible urge to sleep all caused weary students to dream of one thing—time to get some sleep and forget about school.

Most teachers were not amused by sleeping students who, in an altered state of consciousness, missed important assignments, necessary directions, and in extreme cases, credit for the day. "When people sleep in my class, I let them sleep into the next hour. It's fun to see them wake up, wondering where they're supposed to be," said earth science teacher Mr. James Stayer.

Late night studying for tests after rigorous athletic events or practices and demanding jobs contributed to the exhaustion of the greater part of the student body. "The homework from a full schedule takes me anywhere from three to five hours a night," said Angela Williams ('95). Many overworked and under-rested students easily identified with that routine.

Despite lack of sleep, students struggled through classes, snoozing while they should have been taking notes, getting by until they could get home for a nap.

—Laura Ketchum

ATTEMPTING TO KEEP his drooping eyes open, Andy Horning ('95) struggles to keep focused on his class work. Grueling Cross-Country practices and maintaining good grades would cause almost any student to be exhausted.

RERUNS

Never Getting Enough The First Time

Between studying and extra-curricular activities, there came a spare moment for relaxation. TV reruns often occupied these times. For seniors, these reruns were a necessary change from the usual programs viewed for POD. "My favorite rerun is 'Home Improvement,'" said Adrienne Beauvais ('95). "It's better than the POD shows."

Programs such as the "Brady Bunch," "Full House", and "Hangin' with Mr. Cooper" were popular with viewers. The main advantage of sitting down and watching these shows was that they helped students unwind from a long day at school and also left students in a more relaxed frame of mind for their homework.

While some preferred a suspenseful show like "Rescue 911," others enjoyed something a little more unrealistic. "I love to watch 'Star Trek: The Next Generation' because they have some of the most unusual adventures I've ever seen in a TV series," said Angie Williams ('95).

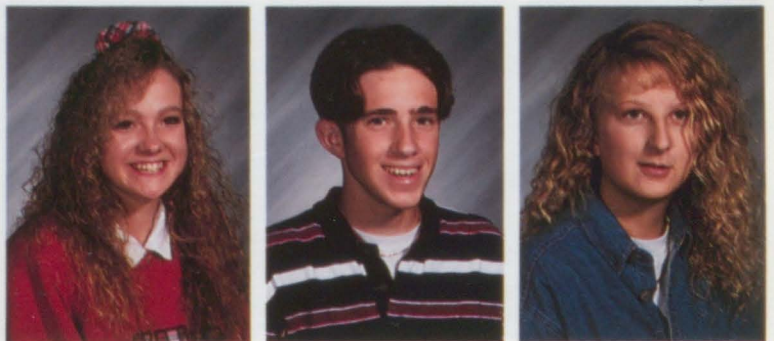

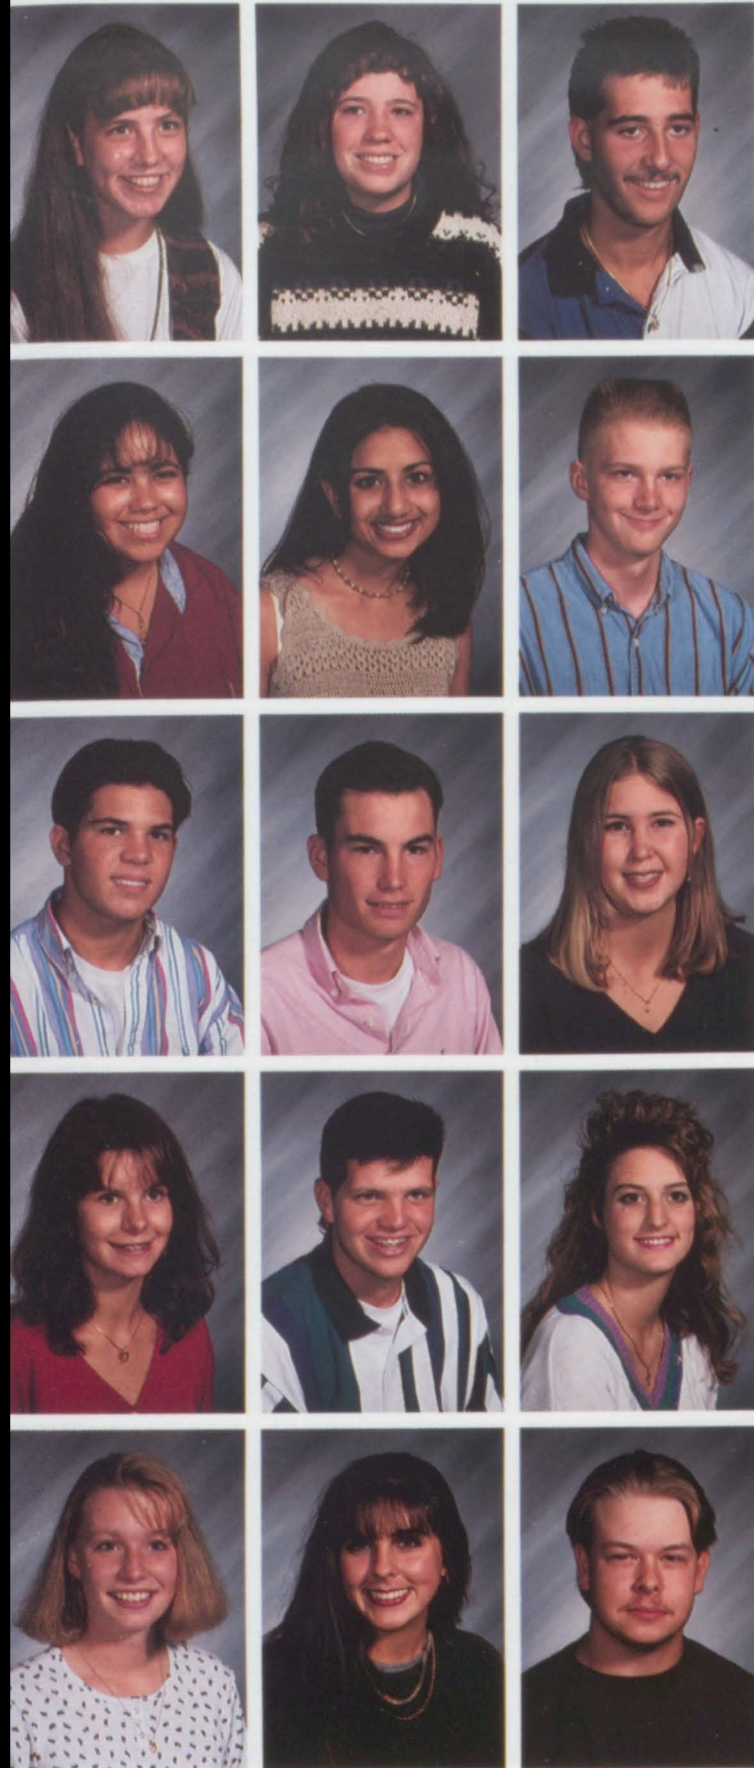

Others enjoyed shows that were a little closer to the life of an actual teenager. "I watch '90210' once a week," said Angie Seefried ('95).

HONOR

Attained To Represent Their Class

Snow Extravaganza's King's Court may not be the most publicized event, but it holds importance to the nominees. Every year disbelief, smiles and a few cheers accompany the announcement over the speaker.

Every year students take the time to nominate who they feel is an all around great person. Nine gentlemen had the honor of representing their class as "royalty." Nice, funny or just plain sweet can get any guy a vote but these nine received a majority.

The Husky men were flattered to be nominated, a memory that will never be forgotten. This attained honor is so great that it can only be topped by being crowned King. After all, this nomination credits these men with great personalities and shows that many people think highly of them.

The days went by and finally Tod Dungan and Eric Bert were elected as the representatives by their classmates for the class of 1995. During the Snow Games they received the satisfaction of walking down the red carpet with the King. Saturday night, the Snow Extravaganza dance provided an opportunity for the nominees, the representatives, and the students to have a fun time. All of the representatives were given their chance to dance in the spotlight.

EXCUSES

Could Be The Only Way Out

"My locker was jammed."
"My alarm didn't go off." "My ride didn't show."

Seniors used these lines four years and they had become a little too common. A need for something different caused some outrageous reasons to top the lists of excuses uttered by students as they rushed through the doorway just after the bell. Some excuses so farfetched that they seem totally unbelievable, were used time and time again. "I spilled juice on my pants, and my mom had to bring me new ones," was used by Lon Coronado ('95).

An excuse is most often a combination of some devious creativity and a little blind luck. Sometimes, good standing among teachers helped too. "I always try to get on my teachers' good sides," said Al McDonald ('95).

Forgotten assignments, however, were a different story. Teachers were less likely to accept dated excuses like, "My dog ate it," when it came to homework. The pleading cries from desperate forgetters amused some teachers but aggravated others. Either way, being late or forgetting homework, added stress to the lives of students.

Officers Handle Class Business

Dedication and ambition qualified a person for class office. Officers spent many hours planning and preparing for activities such as Mardi Gras and Snow Extravaganza.

The junior officers: president, Rory Curtis; vice-president, John Shepherd; secretary, Nate Tracy; and treasurer, Jason Skotcher guided the class in wall building and the games assemblies.

Being an officer was a responsibility not to be taken lightly, since they led all meetings and spent the most time at class functions. "Being the treasurer has been hard most of the time, but also fun most of the time," said Jason Skotcher ('96).

The officers also helped coordinate activities like blood drives, the senior citizen luncheon, and dances.

SPLENDOR

Queen's Court Takes Center Stage

As the third year of the Mardi Gras festivities arrived for the juniors, smiles on the girls' faces were abundant. Peers chose Erica Coleman, Chelley Frohardt, Kari Hall, Danielle Kearns, Raechel Kearns, Jenny Holka, Andrea Krause, and Bobbi Jo Smith as representatives.

Most of the girls felt it was an honor to be nominated. "It's so exciting to have your name announced over the PA and to have your pictured posted in the showcase," said Bobbi Jo Smith ('96).

"It was an honor to be chosen as one of the few girls to represent Queen's Court of the class of '96," said Erica Coleman ('96). Their nomination by their friends and classmates to the court created a memory for all of the nominees to remember for years to come.

Court Captures The Spotlight

For twelve juniors, being nominated for King's Court made memories not easily forgotten. "It was neat," said Steve Wright ('96).

Nominations for King's Court marked the beginning of the 1994 Snow Extravaganza festivities. "I think it's good for some nice guys to be recognized from each class," said Jenny Holka ('96).

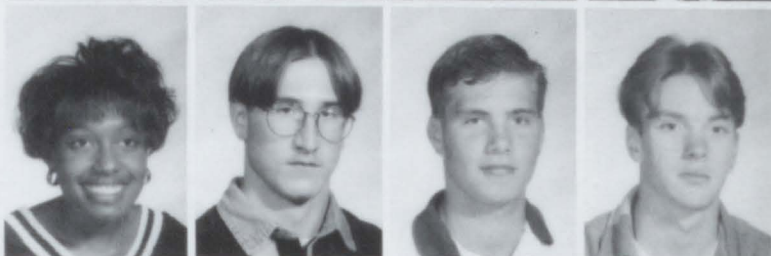

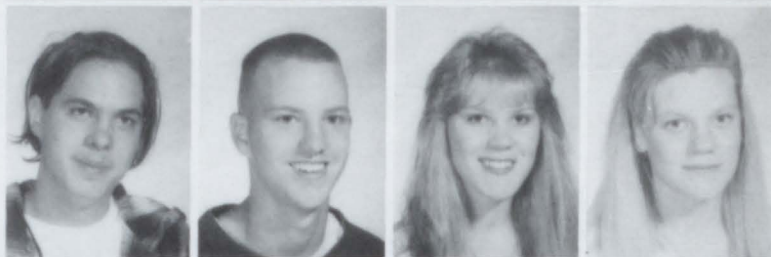

Each of those young men felt honored to be nominated, but hoped to be chosen to be on the King's Court. At the end of the week, after elections, Brian Henderson ('96), and Steve Wright ('96) were selected to represent the class of 1996 at the Snow Extravaganza Dance.

King's Court was another way the young men became a part of Snow Extravaganza.

ASVAB Test Brings Tension

Methods of determining a career varied, but the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery, or ASVAB, aided juniors in making the important decision as to what direction their lives could take. From these results, students determined their various strong points and familiarized themselves with some new career choices that would best correspond with their interests and skills.

A career workbook accompanied the actual results containing instructions on how to decipher the computer printout and learn about interesting professions.

Opinions about the effectiveness of the test varied. "I thought it was a good opportunity to find your interests and realize what you could be good at," said Kara Thompson ('96).

—Barb Wiseman

Looking over her ASVAB scores, Tanya Rutkofske ('96) tries to find the area that interests her most. ASVAB gave juniors a chance to find out about new careers.

COLLEGE

Anticipating The Future

Juniors knew that after high school endless possibilities existed for the future. One of these possibilities was college.

According to Webster's Dictionary, college is defined as "an institution of higher education that grants degrees." However college life entails much more, Juniors faced this reality as they started to look into different schools and make plans for the fast approaching years after graduation.

Location, interests, and cost played a part in choosing the perfect institution of learning. Size became a consideration. Some preferred a small school, while a larger university attracted others. "I'd like to go to a smaller school because you're on a one-to-one basis with the teachers," said Julie Piotter ('96).

ROYALTY

At the Snow Dance

Selecting representatives proved to be a royal decision when the sophomore class picked their ten nominees for King's Court. "I think it's great that the guys get to represent the class in more than just sports," said Hilary Heimbach ('97).

Being nominated created an unforgettable experience. "King's Court was really cool this year; I had a lot of fun," said Chris Manuilow ('97).

Classes held the elections, during the lunch hours to determine who the representatives would be. Carefully counted ballots showed Chris Cates ('97), and Ryan Whiting ('97) the winners, and they represented the class of 1997 on the King's Court at the Snow Extravaganza Dance. This event gave an opportunity to be the center of attention.

MONEY

What It Takes To Make It

Uniforms, late hours, and hair nets became part of the usual routine, an all too familiar scene for sophomores holding a job. Working brought a new and exciting experience for a lot of tenth graders.

Working brought in money, and although the pay usually did not amount to much, it kept teens from borrowing from their parents. "I work at the Table Top. It is okay for the money I am making," said Melissa Baird ('97).

Sophomores finally had a sense of responsibility. Better hours and more sleep would have been ideal for some sophomores, but working meant earning one's own money.

"Work, work, work! It's all I ever do!" said Helena Jach ('97). Facing rude customers, long hours, and low pay were just some of the complaints about having a job.

COURT

An Experience to Remember

Smiles came to the faces of the sophomore girls nominated for Queen's Court when they heard their names being announced over the loud speaker. For some being on Court was not a new experience. For many others being on Court was an exciting, new experience. "I was incredibly shocked to hear my name, but I was really happy," said Melissa Way ('97).

Karrie Genaw and Dana Langolf represented the Class of '97, as chosen by their classmates. Dressed in formals, they arrived during half time of the Mardi Gras game atop classic convertibles. "Being chosen to represent my class in this position, for the second year in a row, was just fabulous," said Karrie Genaw ('97). The evening became a picture-perfect moment that the girls were proud to be a part of and remember forever.

FREEDOM

Means a License to Drive

The road widened, and a new driver saw the yellow and white lines on their own for the first time.

Parents gave a newfound freedom as they put the car keys into a willing hand. "I feel great because I'll be able to drive and will not have to ask my parents for rides anymore," replied Jenny Way ('97).

Once the engine started, freedom began. "I like the idea of having a license and my own car because I can go places and do things without having parents around," said Tracy Hyslop ('97).

Driving involved responsibility and alertness to surroundings. Being a new driver took a lot of time and patience, especially since students had little previous experience.

LEADERS

Moving In The Right Direction

The screams and laughter at exciting assemblies were all effects of the hard work of the student council officers and representatives.

Working on student council sponsored events provided a great way to meet others and get involved. Representatives covered serious issues such as luncheons, blood drives, and canned foods drives. Students took part in activities such as Mardi Gras, Spirit Week, pep assemblies, and dances. "This year students have become more involved in their class activities," said Amy Zimmer ('97).

Student Council required hard working reliable people. "I have learned to work well with others and become more responsible," said Karrie Genaw ('97). Even though it required an enormous amount of work, representatives found Student Council rewarding.

The Class of 1998

Giving a book report could be the most stressful experience one could have, but having to speak in front of the whole freshman class could create even more stress.

Freshman candidates Jean Shepherd, for president; Jordan Sansom, for vice president; and Michelle Lewandowski, for secretary were all on the same ticket. They persuaded their classmates by bouncing a beach ball around the audience and throwing candy into the bleachers.

Freshmen elected Lisa Beedon to the treasurer position. In Beedon's speech she used humorous quotes from television.

Sansom said she ran because, "When I first got to Northern I knew I wanted to have a great freshman year."

ADMIRATION

Striving for the Ultimate Goal

Admiration, not easily attained, but greatly appreciated when bestowed upon most young women. Nomination to Queen's Court can be the ultimate example of this admiration.

Of the nominees, Brooke Hiller and Jean Shepherd were voted to represent the Freshman Class on the Queen's Court.

"I really enjoyed being on the court. I was honored to have been chosen to represent my class. It was all a very memorable, exciting experience," said Hiller ('98).

Surely standing in front of the entire student body was not the easiest thing in the world. Shepherd ('98) said, "I loved getting dressed up and I almost fell out of the car I was riding in. The whole night was a lot of fun."

FITTING IN

With the Real World

It was the first day of high school and upperclassmen were running everywhere, meeting up with old friends.

Many freshmen wanted to play sports like volleyball, basketball, football, and soccer. "Trying to get into sports as a freshman was a lot harder than in years past because there were so many more people trying out for the sports," said Trevor Weston.

Freshmen became involved by joining SADD, student council, yearbook, choir, and band.

Everyone wanted to fit into a new school and Nick Rigney ('98) found fitting in a bit easier than some. "It was easier for me to fit in as a freshman because before school started I was involved in school related activities," said Rigney.

PREPARING

Now For the Future

College? A job? Marriage? These are questions freshmen are already thinking about. Even though three years of high school are yet to come, many students are planning for their futures now. "I plan to go to college to become a teacher," said Mindy Williams ('98).

Many of the class of 1998 agree that college is one of the best ways to guarantee getting a good, high paying job.

While college is the clear choice for many, others have more unconventional ideas. Richard Bland ('98) said "I want to move to Seattle to form a grunge band."

Although some freshmen are still undecided about what to do after high school, most have some kind of plan.

ON A ROLL

Starting Off on the Right Foot

Upperclassmen, a new place, fitting in, and report cards! Welcome to the real world—high school.

High school was a big adjustment for many. New teachers and new material shocked many. Then add the excitement of finally being in high school and you have got a lot of stress.

The anticipation of first report card of the year seemed to cause some anxiety but others were pleased to see the result of their efforts. "I was really surprised with my grades. It was a big adjustment and I thought my grades would drop but I kept them up where they should have been," said Kathy Hirst ('98).

Most students agreed that they gried to get good grades. Cori May ('98) said, "I worked hard to get the grades that I got."

CARING

In Every Sense of the Word

The friendly smile that was so familiar to students belonged to Mr. Alex Crittenden, assistant principal.

Crittenden organized the attendance and kept tardiness to a minimum. Aside from the attendance, he distributed parking permits and enforced parking regulations.

Mr. Crittenden acted not only as an administrator, but as a friend. He decided to become part of a school and work with kids in order to help others. "I like to make people happy," said Crittenden.

Outside of school, Mr. Crittenden is a minister and a family man. His favorite topics while preaching at the Pilgrim Missionary were ones concerning family love and values.

To Serve His Community

Voters heard a familiar name in St. Clair County at election time: Mr. Howard Heidemann. Although he was unsuccessful in running for state representative, he was not discouraged. "Be aware of the great amount of time and effort required to defeat an opponent. Running for a political office requires a total commitment," said Heidemann.

In college Heidemann wanted to be a football coach but his science classes led to teaching chemistry. His favorite college: NEBRASKA.

In his spare time, Heidemann has been a scout master, and has traveled to places such as Maine, Florida, and the Rocky Mountains.

Mr. Heidemann finds learning fascinating and enjoys meeting new people and pursuing new experiences.

In the Eyes of His Students

For freshmen taking CP civics, veteran teacher Mr. Gary Young added some spark to fifty-five minutes that could have been less than exciting. His wit and humor made the study of world geography and government a memorable experience.

Mr. Young's frequent quizzes forced students to learn how to study effectively and retain useful knowledge. Combining lectures with reading assignments from a textbook, he covered the realm of civics thoroughly.

His extensive knowledge of world affairs united outside wisdom with in-class material, making the subjects discussed relevant to real life. Mr. Young went beyond the book to educate his students with facts from newspaper and magazine clippings, giving them an awareness of current events and government officials. "Mr. Young's class challenges you and makes you want to learn," said Jean Shephard ('98).

Blazes Of Brilliance

Academics offered students a full spectrum of educational opportunities to prepare them for the future whether it be college, a technical school, or a job.

A full spectrum of choices of academic pursuit provided opportunities for students to develop to their full potential. A variety of accelerated classes offered a challenge to the serious student. Advanced Placement classes in POD, American history, English, biology, and math offered students an academic challenge with a possibility of college credit. "The more challenging curriculum of AP courses will help me adjust to the standards of college classes," said Sujana Gundlapalli ('95). College preparatory classes gave college bound students a wide range of choices to prepare them for further education.

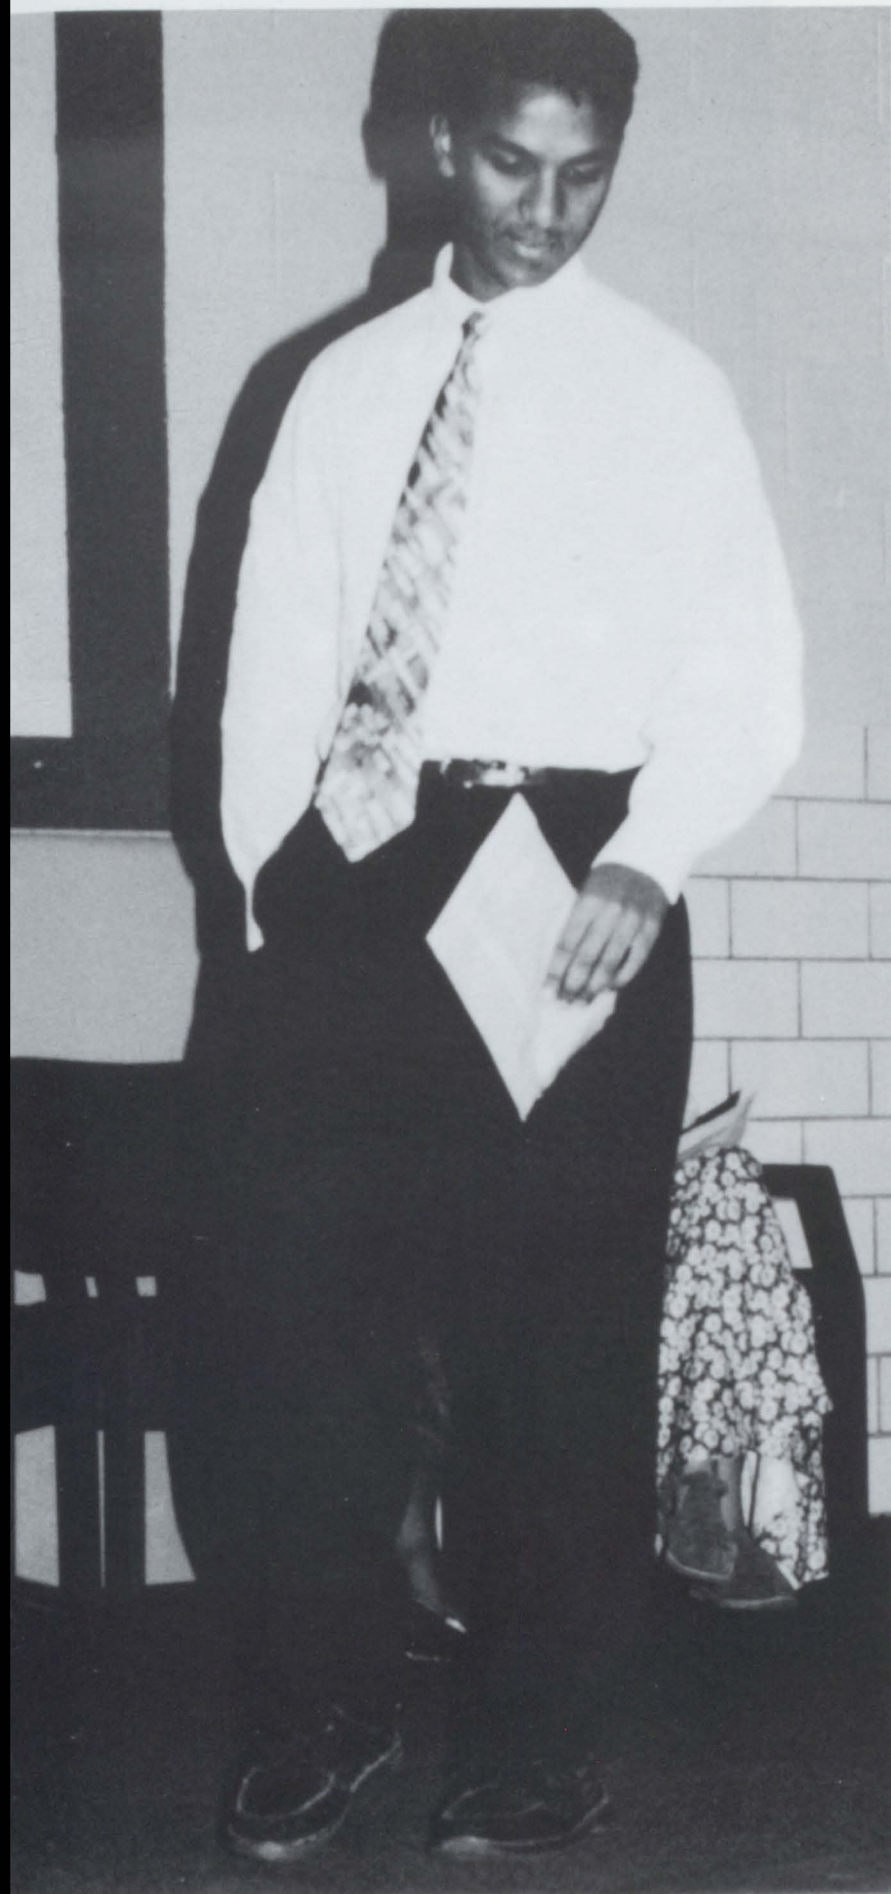

"The more challenging curriculum of AP courses will help me adjust to the standards of college classes."—Sujana Gundlapalli ('95)

Auto shop, co op, clerical and business courses, along with the Tech Center curriculum provided opportunities for the job hunters. The variety of classes from accelerated to classes for the student with special needs provided an academic environment challenging to the entire student body.

Inside Nature

Studying stars, the human body, elements, compounds, energy, and the environment can be made fun by taking one of the many science classes.

Students who plan to go into the medical field had the opportunity to take anatomy to learn how the structure of the human body works. "I enjoyed anatomy because learning about the whole human body was a mystery to me," said Kelly Beecroft ('95). Anatomy gave students a chance to explore a new area of science. "I never liked science classes until I got into Mr. Nesbitt's anatomy and physiology class. He makes things interesting," said Jude Carter ('95).

Students that were interested in the structure of the earth took earth science to learn about the different aspects of the earth, such as rocks, minerals, and what the inside of the earth is made of.

Chemistry students experimented with different chemicals and elements, and learned what made up an atom. Throughout the year the chemistry teachers showed the students what happened when certain chemicals bonded. "Memorizing chemicals was tough, but I liked Mr. Blackney's nutty messages on the door," said Maura McCarthy ('97).

Biology included dissection projects to investigate the parts of various organisms. Biology prepared a student for chemistry, anatomy, and physics.

The different science classes offered helped to prepare students for a career in the science field or to better understand the universe.

Expressing Effectively

Expanding the mind and vocabulary did not stop with English classes. For many, that was only the beginning. Foreign language classes aided in the understanding of many cultures and different people.

In taking Spanish, students learned about Hispanic ancestry and how to speak the language. First year students gained basic knowledge of how to construct sentences and the lyrics to several folk songs. Second and third-year students focused more on verb conjugations, tenses, and the finer points of the language. "It's fun to speak in a foreign language and learn about other cultures," said Helena Jack ('97).

Watching movies in a different language and making special projects for the holidays brought out the lighter side of the course. In some language classes students brought food items to school that were typically found in the homes of those countries which they were studying.

In French class, students got a taste of the French culture. Crepes, cappacino, major fashion trends, the Eiffel Tower, and the language itself made up what students learned about the French. "I took French because I would like to travel to France someday," said Corrine Farley ('97).

In German, students had similar projects and ideas as the Spanish and French classes. "I took German because of my background. It is kind of hard but Mrs. Hesterberg makes it fun," said Adina Vonanderseck ('96).

Communication in a different way of life defined sign language, which helped others to understand, learn from, and teach the hearing impaired. "I wanted to learn more about the deaf community," said Drew Denomme ('97).

Written tests and oral exercises were both important parts of each language class.

Physical Challenges

Getting up in front of the whole class to see how many pushups one can do is not the ideal way to spend 45 minutes of the day. However, showing off skills could be.

Gym class could be boring on some days. Other days in the required class, students had fun while being faced with challenges. For a change of pace during the school day, students had a chance to exercise physically instead of mentally.

Students attempted to improve certain skills and talents. Although not every student enjoys physical activities, most do. "I really don't mind going to gym. It gives me a chance to learn new activities and improve my skills," said Jill Silver ('98).

Even though gym is a required course, there are several options that were available to students such as co-ed gym, weights, sports theory and general gym. Each course was designed for individual ability and skill.

Co-ed gym was different from all the others, not only because boys and girls were mixed, but the activities in the class are different. From golf to badminton to track, the class changed from indoor to outdoor.

Weights class, although only open to upperclassmen, was a way to test physical abilities as well as tighten muscles.

Sports Theory gave students an opportunity to learn the right way to play a sport.

The students pushed to go above and beyond the normal requirements.

Helping Out

Aides were an important part of the school year. They were the students who helped to make the offices, and classrooms run more smoothly. There were at least two aides in the offices each hour. Jobs of an office aide consisted of taking passes to students throughout the building, answering phones, giving people directions, picking up attendance slips, and filing various papers. "The best thing about being an office aide was that I got to run around the halls and play on the computers," said Eric Bert ('95).

Some students had Business Work Experience which meant they worked in the offices and received a credit for helping out. In order for students to receive credit they must have completed a year of typing. "Working in the attendance office gave me a break during the school day," said Erin McLaughlin ('96).

Students who were interested in janitorial work had an opportunity to take a janitorial block class. This class offered a student a chance to do a janitors work such as sweeping the hallways, cleaning the windows, mopping, picking up garbage and mowing the lawn. "I like it a lot, I enjoy cleaning, but keeping the halls clean is a lot of work," said Mark Duckworth ('96).

Not only were the jobs of aides and the students in janitorial block important, but they were necessary to the functioning of the school. They helped make it run smoothly and kept it on track.

Each student had a special part in helping the school run more efficiently.

Creativity Explored

Students who possessed artistic talents excelled in two creative classes: art and mechanical drawing. These classes challenged participants to think of and view objects in a new way.

In art class, taught by Ms. Julie LaBeau, students had a chance to draw pictures using their own interpretation. "I liked taking art classes because they gave me a chance to express my creativity in different forms," said Mike Rutkofske ('95).

These art classes gave students a chance to investigate in depth two and three dimensional drawings and paintings, along with pen and ink sketches. Artists completed more involved works in graphic design, print making, wood sculptures, and jewelry pieces later in the year.

A T-square, scale, and sharp pencil, along with a bright mind, were the tools necessary in Mr.

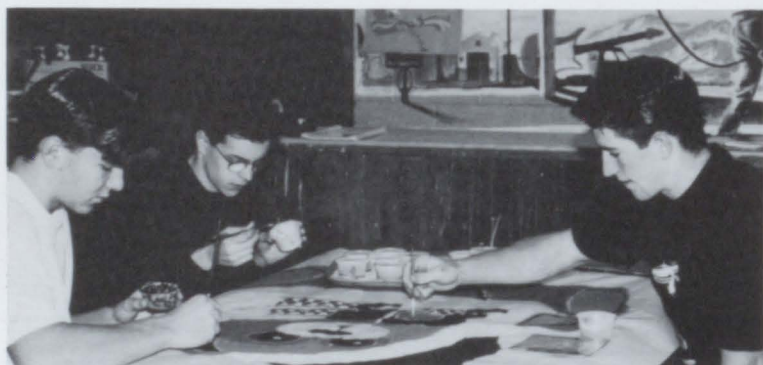

Johnson's mechanical drawing class.

Mechanical drawing involved drawing three dimensional designs and required precision, accuracy, and a steady hand. "It took time to learn how to think of shapes from all angles, but once you get it you look at everything from a new perspective," said Matt Wagner ('97). These students learned that with a positive attitude and a creative mind they could achieve any goal that they set their sights on.

Students who had taken mechanical drawing found their new skills useful in deciding whether or not to pursue a career in architecture or design.

Inner Workings

Certain classes offered at school could prepare a young person for decisions later in life. Child Development, health, and psychology dealt with children, marriage, emotions, and learning to think creatively and positively.

Child development was one of those classes. The class dealt with how children are born, the care of the child, and how to deal with the stress of raising them in society. There were different reasons why a student would want to take child development. "I wanted to be mentally ready for a child for when I get pregnant. I thought that would be a good way to learn about children," said Jodi DuPuie ('97). Others took the class for different reasons. "I have a child and I wanted to learn more about children," said Jessica Swoffer ('97).

Health class informed students about how the body works, how to take care of it, substances that are harmful to the body, and how to avoid stress. "It teaches students a lot of things that are going to be useful in the future," said Bethany Fagan ('98). A lot of guest speakers came to inform classes on a wide variety of things. "The school requires health class because you need to know about the way your body functions," said Jessica Williams ('98).

Psychology was very helpful for students who planned to go into the psychiatric field. The class dealt with how a person thinks and how to handle emotions. "We talked about growing up, life, and dealing with everyday problems," said Luke Bland ('95).

College Early On

The thought of college classes while still in high school was not for all students. However, for the dedicated few who accepted the challenge, five advanced placement classes were available: American history, Problems of Democracy, biology, English and calculus.

Participants in these classes found them much more academically challenging than average classes, but also very time-consuming. Lengthy reading assignments, detailed research papers, and frequent tests were standard procedure for these scholars.

Students chose AP classes for different reasons. While some were interested in a tougher class, others had a strong interest in the course offered and wished to learn more about the subject than was possible in another class. Most took them to gain college credit and experience a college-level course.

Supplemental readings were introduced in Mr. Rutofsky's AP class, giving students additional information from a viewpoint other than the textbook author's. In Mrs. Rogers' AP POD course, seniors undertook a more in depth study of government. Newspapers, which were a major part of regular POD classes, were used to supplement discussions. Mrs. Wojtas' AP English students analyzed literature and wrote higher-level compositions. AP classes demanded efficient study habits and concise writing skills. "I think these classes really prepared me for the workload I'll have in college," said Kelly Fitzgibbon ('95).

The Globe Up Close

Five and a half billion people inhabit the earth today. Having knowledge of the cultures and races that make up those 5,500,000,000 people is necessary to civilized survival.

Students entering the ninth grade were required to pass civics, a class designed to teach about the United States government. "I liked civics because it explained the laws; what we can do and what we can't do," said Kathy Hirst ('98).

Two other classes were required in the area of social sciences: American history for juniors and Problems of Democracy for seniors. American history covered the United States' past from discovery to present-day. POD taught students about current events through the use of newspoints and a textbook.

Some students chose to take Michigan History or World History as elective classes. Sophomores were not required to take a social studies class, but most chose to enroll in World History to gain a greater knowledge of the world around them.

Classes in the social studies department were offered to prepare students for college. Since most colleges recommended a strong social studies background consisting of three or four years of instruction during high school, social studies classes aimed to prepare students for higher level learning.

Although classes in the social sciences required much time and effort, most students found them rewarding. "It's demanding, but you learn a lot. I liked American history with Mr. Anderson, he made it interesting," said Nick Brandt ('95).

Technical Business

Jobs require specific talents or skills. Typing, computers, and business technology classes enabled students to acquire many of those skills.

Typing gave students a chance to improve their keyboarding skills. "I took typing because I felt it was important to acquire a skill that would be useful to me my whole life," said Kelly Bonney ('97).

Computers enabled students to use a word processor and also learn about the Internet, a global communications network. The class enabled students to communicate with others around the world and broaden their understanding of how a computer works. Experience with computers helped prepare for the highly technical developments expected in coming years. "I thought computers was interesting because I learned about the future," said Fred Kaufman ('97).

In business technology, Sabrina Rowland ('97), Nicole Appleford ('97) and Amy Hampton ('97) look over their books. Business Technology allowed students to get ahead in the job market.

The variety of skills taught in computer class helped students to understand the technologies important to success in the work force.

Business technology taught skills needed for clerical work. This class offered a chance to advance in the business field. Those who wanted a career as a secretary benefitted from this course. "I have learned a lot in my business technology class. I type much more accurately, I've learned the correct way to use computers, and I can file papers correctly," said Tara Reyna ('95).

Developing Skills

For those students who had special needs, Directed Studies offered help. These classes gave students many scholastic opportunities. In Directed Studies classes there were fewer students, which made it easier for a teacher to focus on an individual's needs.

With a more relaxed atmosphere, some students were assured the extra help they needed and deserved. "I thought Directed Studies was a great opportunity for students on different levels to understand the basic needs of life," said Christina Crull ('96).

Teachers of Directed Studies tried to make classes as interesting and educational as possible.

Lending a hand, Directed Studies student April Gerlach ('98) dusts at Birchwood Athletic Club. Cleaning was one way students helped out.

Having fun while learning basic skills encouraged students to do their best and to never stop learning.

Activities like shopping trips and muffin sales helped pupils to learn about money while it also allowed them to enjoy themselves. In addition, cooking a Thanksgiving dinner taught students necessary domestic skills and how to work together.

Having fun was not the only focus of the classes, but it made the students more eager to participate in activities and get along. "This was an educational class that helped us get ready for the working world. In PreVocation, we also learn to work together as a team and to accept one another," said Kristen Martin ('97).

Finding Solutions

Variables, formulas, exponents, tetrahedrals, planes, and rays. To students, these words meant numbers, solutions, and lots of work. Classes ranged from basic math to AP calculus, offering a chance for everyone to learn at their own level.

In geometry, students saw architecture as an inspiration to learn about acute, obtuse, and right angles. Trigonometry centered on equations about triangles. Students determined lengths and angles as a surveyor or engineer would on the job.

The graphing calculator enabled students in calculus, algebra, and geometry to view the graphs that they were analyzing.

For students still struggling with the concepts of addition and subtraction, some courses taught simple computation. Others sought the challenge of accelerated classes like AP calculus.

While in algebra class, Scott Borntrager ('98) offers his assistance to Jennifer Herbert ('97). Student help made classwork easier.

"Algebra has taught me how to utilize my math skills to the best of my potential," said Sarah Mendoza ('97).

Algebra dealt with learning how to solve equations, the quadratic formula and the constant of an equation, the difference of squares, the FOIL method, and proofs. "I liked algebra because it had a challenge to it, and it made me think about what I had to do," said Christie Doan ('97).

Although math classes may have seemed unnecessary to some, the courses were logical and applicable to everyday life. From addition and subtraction to factoring polynomials, math is used throughout students' lives.

Greasy Workings

Greasy cars, complicated machinery, and advanced technology were part of three classes: auto shop, power mechanics, and electronics. These classes gave students the hands-on experience to learning. "That was my second year in that class. I learned more in there than I had in any other class throughout school," said Brett Nixon ('95).

Students learned information from reading the textbook and from instructor demonstrations. "The technology made it more difficult for the kids to comprehend material, and there were a lot more objectives to teach. But they were learning the material well and having fun at the same time," said Mr. Lynn Esterline.

Under the hood, Adam Harvey ('95) checked plugs for the distributor. These plugs required periodic changes.

Auto mechanics taught students the different parts of a car, and also how to fix various automobiles.

In electronics class Mr. Johnson taught how to test for electrical problems. Students learned how to use many types of electronic diagnostic equipment that was used in the diagnosis of charging systems, computer problems, and general trouble shooting.

Students learned to work together on various projects, and learned about many different things from each other. "I have learned a lot from Mr. Esterline and from other people in auto shop," said Justin Brown ('95).

With these classes students gained experience and expertise in an area of the work that they may eventually get into.

Exploring Literature

"Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou, Romeo?" This legendary phrase could be heard throughout freshman English classes. Witchcraft and black magic drew sophomores into The Crucible. Juniors and seniors put their ideas into print and attempted comprehension of such works as MacBeth.

Some may have believed English classes were basically the same, but this was not true. They differed in many ways. Not only were different genres of literature studied, but students also read and analyzed writings by classical authors. Students sharpened their writing skills by creating lit logs and composing and editing papers. Teachers selected popular authors to give the readers a look at modern works. John Grisham, Michael Crichton, and Alice Hoffman placed high among favorite authors.

Composition classes gave students an opportunity to express their creative side. They experimented with different styles of expository writing, such as comparison/contrast papers and descriptive essays. In doing this, they learned new ways to convey their thoughts.

American literature made students aware of American authors from a historical perspective beginning with colonial times and progressing through the twentieth-century contemporary period. "I enjoyed my accelerated English class very much. It gave me the chance to explore my own thoughts and ideas, but also allowed me to discover my peers' opinions," said Shawna Glombowski ('97).

Making The Sale

What is business? Business has to do with buying and selling and knowing how to meet the needs of consumers.

Accounting, marketing, school store, and business law helped students learn more about how to be successful in the business world. "Marketing helps me to perform at my best for the customers and use these skills in the real world," said Brian Lacey ('95).

Working in the school store gave students a chance to work with the customers and learn the responsibilities that came with operating a store. "Working in the school store was fun and it was a good experience," said

Mary Dunavant ('95).

Business law was the study of all kinds of laws provided for businesses by state governments. "Business Law is going to help me in the future when I own my own business someday," said Melanie Brennan ('97).

Accounting class was taken by students to understand the taxations of numbers. Calculators, workbooks, pencils, pens, and lots of white-out were just a few tools of accounting.

Marketing was another class that students took to learn about jobs. "Being in marketing class was a chance to be able to work in the school store and learn about retail and other forms of business," said Kara Thompson ('96).

Spreading The Word

Lights . . . camera . . . action! These were some of the words most often heard on the set of the television production course. Television production gave students who were interested in broadcasting a chance to learn the basics and get some experience working in an actual television studio. "TV production was so much fun if you liked working with cameras. It was a wonderful experience," said Mandy Secord ('96).

WORW, the student run radio station, also gave students an opportunity to display their talents in communication. "Working at WORW for three years was a rewarding experience that I will always remember, especially the close friends I gained from it," said Michelle Wetzel ('95).

Yearbook students wrote copy and took pictures to put together an interesting book. If requirements were not met, students stayed after school, sometimes until nine o'clock at night to meet deadlines. If too many deadlines were missed, a late yearbook and lower sales resulted.

For TV production or WORW, students took the prerequisite semester of speech and one other semester of broadcast arts. "Speech was a great class where you could talk to friends and get to know other people better," said Andy Cone ('97).

Bright Futures

Kelly Beecroft
DAR Award

Kelly Beecroft received the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizen Award for her involvement in school and community activities.

The words extremely dedicated described the seniors who received academic honors. These students spent their high school careers striving for excellence in all areas of the curriculum.

After seven semesters, five individuals stood at the head of the class with perfect 4.0 grade point averages as valedictorians: Kristin Baska, Sarah Boucher, Sujana Gundlapalli, Marleigh Norton, and Anne Winkler. LeaAnn Witzke was named salutatorian after maintaining a cumulative grade point average of 3.973.

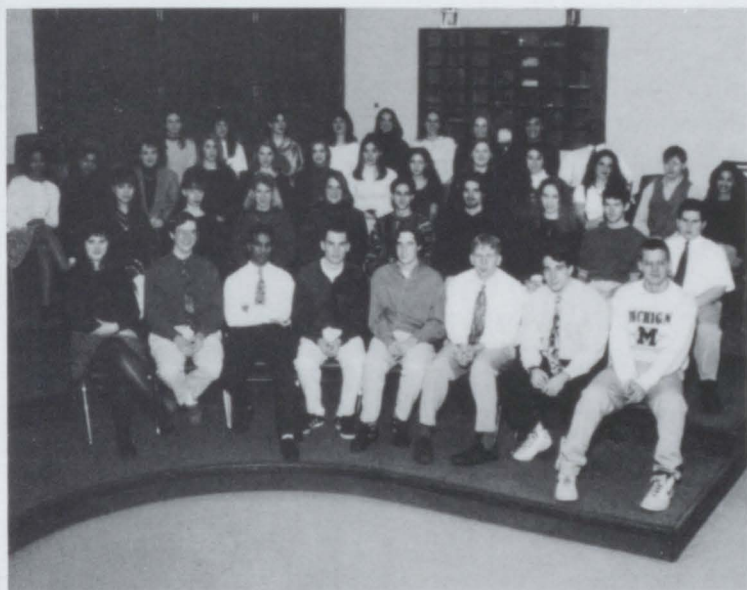

Forty-two seniors who maintained a 3.5 cumulative grade point received recognition for their achievements, along with the top twenty students below the valedictorians and salutatorian.

In addition to these awards, twenty-six others were commended for attaining the Academic Scholar's Diploma which required a 3.5 or higher grade-point average in academically challenging courses, combined with at least seventy-fifth percentile on the ACT or SAT and completion of two years of study in fine arts.

Maintaining commendable grades in difficult classes often posed problems for some of these students who, in addition to classwork, participated in extra-curricular activities like Student Council or one of many athletic teams. However, their perseverance and determination to excel brought them success upon graduation.

Expanding The Spectrum

A full spectrum of activities offered opportunities for students with various talents to perform, or those who wanted to become involved for a cause, or those who wanted to join together with similar interests to just have fun. Activities played an important role in many students' lives and provided them with the opportunity to work together as a team.

A marching band performance involved approximately 200 students. Musicians along with the flag corps performed together. The All School Play combined the talents of actors, musicians, artists, the stage crew, and behind the scenes people involving a total of over sixty students.

"Participating in after school activities made me feel good about myself especially when I succeeded," said Jenny Sargent ('95), a four year member of the Flag Corps.

SADD had a serious mission—to make students aware of the dangers of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Approximately 500 students along with 25 advisers and a student activities director made cocurricular activities a full spectrum of opportunity.

Leaders

Ninety-five students, both elected and appointed gathered each Tuesday morning with a common goal: to organize student activities. Student Council members planned both Mardi Gras and Snow Extravaganza, which indirectly involved most of the student body. "It was exciting to participate in the obstacle course for my class in hopes of winning the games," said Brett Langolf ('95).

Election to the council involved gathering signatures from classmates for a petition and receiving enough votes. Officers appointed Executive Board members on the basis of their completed applications.

Members were required to maintain a grade point average of 2.0 and earn 125 points each semester. Chairing committees or working at student council sponsored events enabled students to accumulate these necessary points.

Dedicated

What a busy group! Student Council was an organization that helped the community and the school. Each grade had representatives to express the class' ideas. "It's fun to be a part of everything, and you have a voice in pretty much everything that goes on," said Kate McKelvey ('97).

Student Council washed graffiti off the fence outside the school. They held a senior citizen luncheon and a blood drive for the people who were in need of a blood transfusion. During the Christmas season, they organized a canned food drive for the Salvation Army to help the needy.

Student Council representatives were busy with all these projects, but they still had fun. "I think that it was really fun to be a part of Student Council and to be helpful," said Amanda Angerbrandt ('97).

Rhythm

Drums pounding and horns blaring composed the sounds of the marching band. Through freezing weather and dampening rain, the band played as the Colorguard performed, encouraging spirit in the crowd and entertaining them during halftime. "I like marching band because I can support the football team," said Amy McCabe ('98).

Dressed in black with vibrant sashes, the Colorguard twirled to the tune of "Fiddler on the Roof" played by the band. These members utilized their sense of concentration to stay in step. "Being on Colorguard was a chance to help me meet new people," said Jennie Schuler ('98).

The trips taken by the band and their competition with other schools called for necessary funds, which members earned through a fruit sale early in the fall.

Together, the two groups helped to develop musical talent and enhance school spirit in the stands.

Harmony

The be-bop music of a forties band emerged from the band room, and gave the halls the aura of a post World War night club.

Jazz band not only performed the big band classics of the forties, but also the rock songs of the fifties, sixties, and seventies. The Northern Lights jazz band furthered the musical knowledge of its players in a different way. "Being in jazz band has taught me a lot. The music allows you to play in your own unique style," said Stephanie Jones ('95).

The bands began their season of performances with a Christmas concert, combining old holiday favorites with less recognized melodies. The evidence of long rehearsals flowed through the gymnasium, enchanting listeners of all ages.

Together, these two bands practiced diligently to make their programs the best. Their dedicated efforts under the direction of Mr. Scott Teeple made the year successful.

In Tune

Muffled voices escaped from the performing arts room as Mr. Dennis Hawtin led the group in singing.

Three classes: chorale, concert choir, and festival choir offered opportunities for those with vocal talent.

Choir members performed at the Salvation Army Citadel, SC4, and Westminster Presbyterian Church, along with the in-school performance at the fine arts assembly.

Singing at halftime at football games gave the choir more recognition than in previous years.

"We enjoy performing for everybody. It lets them see something that we have worked hard to accomplish," said chorale president Jolene Vetteese ('95).

Mr. Hawtin spent hours choosing the best music for each of his choirs. "Each individual group of kids are hard workers. In getting to know what they are capable of, I can choose the right things for them," said Mr. Hawtin.

Character

By demonstrating scholarship, character, service, leadership, and maintaining a 3.3 GPA, students were eligible for National Honor Society.

NHS sponsored the Academic Awards Assembly and the Scholarship Luncheon. The chapter also donated time to various service projects, such as free tutoring programs which enabled students to receive one-on-one help with difficult subjects.

Co-sponsors Mrs. Ann Murphy and Mrs. Irene Hammill directed the National Honor Society. "NHS is a good way to get involved in school and community activities. The group offered a lot of services and was fun to be a part of," said Lucie Preston ('96).

Enthusiasm

"Let's get it started . . . " These words were shouted as the North Stars began to perform.

Members also modeled at the mall and went to dance camps to better prepare them for the coming season. "I loved North Stars. Sometimes it got a little hard, but it was fun. I'm really glad I joined," said Wendy Dalrymple ('97).

The unique tradition of the Cone Crew continued with Brett Langolf ('95) and Jeremy Luhman ('95) as co-presidents. "It was quite an honor to be chosen as co-president and exciting to receive the honor at the senior assembly," said Jeremy Luhman ('95). The Cone Crew attended home basketball and hockey games to pump up the crowd and the players with their giant orange cones.

Intellect

Three groups, Quiz Bowl, the Young Educator's Society, and Chess Club involved students using their minds, but in different ways.

YES gave students a look into the lives and duties of educators of different types. "YES gave me a chance to explore my options in the education field," said Jodi Silver ('95).

Quiz bowl, headed by Mr. Lonnie Rutkofske, Dr. William Johnston, and Mr. Fred Green, offered the challenge of putting knowledge to the test.

Varsity captain, Scott Paladino ('95) and junior varsity captain Joy Wojtas ('96) worked to make the teams successful. "I joined Quiz Bowl because I like the challenge and I enjoyed the competition," said Rajiv John ('98).

Business

It seems the world is for sale. Most people cannot leave the house without being distracted by a neon advertisement or a billboard.

DECA, headed by Mrs. Connie Kreh and Mr. Al Gable, provided hands-on experience for students interested in a marketing career. DECA students demonstrated their skills for awards in marketing at an annual competition at Birchwood Mall. "I like to see students get involved in DECA because I think students need activities other than athletics in which to participate," said Mrs. Kreh.

BPA focused on leadership roles in the business world. BPA students, led by Ms. Pat Knapp, participated in competitions on regional, state, and national levels. "I like BPA because it gave me a chance to meet new people and be in a competitive atmosphere," said Heather Barnes ('96).

Challenge

Today's world is more automated than ever. Daily activities at the bank or the grocery store incorporate some form of electronic technology. These technological advances make it necessary to educate a large group of trained individuals with vast electronic knowledge.

Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, or VICA, encouraged students interested in pursuing a career in electronics. VICA consisted of students from Mr. Paul Johnson's electronics class.

VICA members participated in an initial regional competition which narrowed all members down to a single state champion who proceeded to the national competition in Kansas City.

"VICA does two things. It brings notoriety to the electronics program and it helps to recruit students for the electronics class," said Mr. Johnson.

Production

From morning to night, WORW, the student-run radio station, broadcasts a variety of music from top forty to country western over the airwaves.

After completing one semester of speech and another of broadcast arts, students could apply for a position on staff. "I took radio because it's a great chance to get hands-on training in the communications field, which is what I want to go into. It will definitely pay off in the future," said Jana Gilbert ('95).

For members of the Drama Club, the quotation "all the world's a stage" held true. Giving students a chance to perform onstage meant instant popularity for this organization. "I liked Drama Club because it gave me the opportunity to be in plays both inside and outside of school. I got to meet great people," said Stephanie Mullins ('97).

Slopes

The ride up the slope in a swinging and loosely attached chairlift was worth the exhilarating glide down for skiers in the Ski Club.

Weather permitting, this organization offered members a chance to ski on Friday nights for a reduced rate at Mount Holly Ski Area. These bus trips eased the burdens of transportation and cost of gas for many skiers who found they could not ski as often or as affordably on their own.

In order to raise money for the trip to Aspen, Colorado, members held a ski swap in the cafeteria in December. This event, coordinated by adviser Dr. Bill Kreis, helped to defray the cost of the spring trip and also provided area shoppers with more affordable ski equipment.

The Ski Club added excitement to the dreary winter months and allowed skiers a taste of some of the world's best skiing in Aspen in April.

Sobriety

Zero point zero eight. Somebody's winning lottery number? Not exactly. For someone in a state which has set 0.08 as the legal blood alcohol concentration for drivers 21 and older, this number has saved lives.

SADD stands for Students Against Driving Drunk. "SADD has influenced my choices about driving drunk by showing all of the things that happen while under the influence of alcohol. I don't believe in driving drunk or drinking at all. When the SADD group talks about this, it makes me realize that driving drunk is not worth risking your life so you can have a little fun," said Jenny Doan ('97).

Helpers

"I'll be right back. Could you watch the phone while I'm gone please? Could you run this pass for me? Could you file this paper?" An aide in the main office, attendance office, or counselor's wing heard these questions often. "It was very interesting because of the skills I learned, like filing," said Crestan Miller ('97).

Running passes, answering phones, and delivering papers to mailboxes constituted the duties which aides performed. Most students were asked to drop their study hall to be an aide. This opportunity gave students a chance for work experience early on.

Pressure, pressure, pressure! It has to be perfect, it has to be interesting, it has to be journalistically correct.

The yearbook staff put time and dedication into producing the best yearbook possible. Co-editors Scott Cummings ('95) and Julie Esterline ('95) along with three other students, Hilary Bridge ('96), Amy Franchuk ('95) and Dana Catlett ('96), attended week-long workshops in August to learn about current yearbook trends, grids, and lay-

Diverging Talents

Applause and wild cheers accompanied the football and basketball players as they raced onto the field or floor to meet their opponents. Quiet inspiration encouraged the members of the golf or cross-country teams to play their best game or run their fastest race. Rivalries on the field, court, track, arena, or mat drove competitors toward excellence in their sport. Throughout this quest for perfection, coaches and athletes worked side by side.

Four new teams for both men and women were added to the full spectrum of athletic opportunities available. Additional funding enabled students to participate in school sponsored soccer for the first time. Numerous young women could try out for newly formed freshmen basketball and volleyball teams. For young men, freshmen wrestling became an option. These extra chances to become involved in competitive high-school sports evoked more enthusiasm among both upper and underclassmen. "Freshmen sports teams are a good idea because they increase a freshman's opportunity to participate in sports at the high school level," said Sara Ziemba ('98).

Participation in sports created a lasting bond among athletes, as they formed friendships and learned firsthand about teamwork. Their dedication to long hours of grueling drills and their determination to dominate in their division led athletes toward a common goal: victory.

Equals Success

aggressiveness, agility, and speed summarize the qualities needed to become a great track and field athlete. Possession of these qualities aided the track team in their victorious season.

Coaches Gary Nesbitt, Dana Pool, and Dan Hanton conditioned, trained, and motivated the team. Captain Jana Gilbert encouraged and led them.

Dual meets were held both at home and at other area schools. Runners and competitors in the field events attempted to gain as many points as possible toward the team score.

Invitational meets added to the season, giving teammates extra competitions. The Marysville and Husky Relays were successful ones for the team. "I think overall, we had a very good season," said Andrea White ('96).

he gun sounded, the runners took off, each eager to cross the finish line first and earn first place.

Hurdles, high jump, long jump, pole vault, shotput and discus, along with races of various durations composed the events that took place during a track meet.

Practices for two hours each day after school and one or more meets each week demanded a lot of dedication and energy from the team members. "Being on the track team took a lot of hard work," said Chris Manuilow ('95).

Different things helped the runners prepare physically, as well as mentally. "Hard work, concentration, and getting pumped before a race help me to run faster," said Adam Bennett ('96).

The effort that the team put into their sport helped them to go undefeated in dual meets. "Track took up a lot of time, but it was worth it," said Josh Rawlings.

he team broke from the huddle and took their positions on the field. Intense looks passed over the face of each player. Their games and practices took up hours each night after school. Drills were repeated over and over, with perfection as the only goal.

New players developed into sportsmen. Playing the game meant more than just throwing and catching to them. It became a feeling and a dream. "I love watching the guys play. They have so much energy and skill," said manager Jeremy Turner ('95).

Is What It Takes

eamwork, skill, and enthusiasm. The junior varsity baseball and softball teams exhibited these traits as they began their seasons. With many new freshmen faces, they proved that they could compete at the high school level.

Strategy played a big part in achieving the goal of winning games. At many games, players and coaches discussed the best technique in achieving a victory. Quick eyes and good reflexes were a major part of preventing the opponent from scoring runs.

Winning was not the only part of the game for these teams. Many players aimed to develop their skills.

Some saw it as a learning experience, others, a chance to define new talents as a team member. Either way, the teams worked to advance to the varsity squad next year.

hundreds of similar cleatmarks covered the baseball diamond as the varsity and JV softball teams prepared for a game. Players spread from base to base stretching, batting, and catching fly balls.

Freshman newcomers to the team began their season at tryouts, a new experience for some, for others, an old routine. "Try outs were tough in the beginning, but I tried because I was determined to make the team," said Amanda Bishop ('97). Older players returned to the field with more confidence about the try-out. Their experience on the team in previous seasons helped them to fine tune their skills. "Playing a JV sport for at least a year helps build not only your endurance, but also your confidence," said Andrea Baker ('96).

Veteran varsity team members began their season under the watchful eye of Coach Ed Peltz. Seniors Erin Atwell, Hilary Hoxsie, and Annie Reeves returned for their final year on the team.

Players spent after school time at practice and games. Away matches required even more time. Coach Peltz made the most out of practice to fine tune the team's skills. "At every practice, we worked hard. Coach was determined to get us ready for every game," said Brenda O'Malley ('95). Intense drills prepared the teams for their successful season.

OCUS and Desire

From the first practice in August to state competition for the varsity squad, the women's tennis teams had an excellent season.

The varsity team, coached by Mr. Al Wright, finished the season with a 7-1 record and Christee Chargot ('98) as the most valuable player. For the seventh consecutive year, the varsity players won the league tournament. They also placed tenth at the state finals. "This is a great team with a great future. It is one of the best teams I've ever coached," said Coach Wright.

Early Saturday

tournaments and numerous after-school matches took up many hours of each varsity player's time, but their desire to win and devotion to the sport motivated them.

An outstanding record of 11-2-1 finished the season for the JV team which was coached by Mrs. Mary Kay Baribeau. Dawn Thomas ('98) was chosen as most valuable player. "This team has a lot of talent. I feel a lot of the girls have the ability to make next year's varsity if they work during the off season," said Coach Baribeau.

And Determination

ven for most athletic people, it took a great amount of energy and determination to run to the end of the driveway and back, let alone run three miles for pure enjoyment. But for the members of the men's cross-country team this distance was a common occurrence.

The team finished their chilly season with a record of 2-4. Accomplished runner Cameron Chapman ('96) finished one of his most rewarding and impressive seasons and also competed in the state finals.

The season had a rather rough beginning, due to the loss of several valuable runners because of graduation. "We could have done better, but we had a decent season for losing our seniors," said Mike Mechtenberg ('96).

Coach Mark Maxwell directed the runners at their grueling practices and encouraged them in their races. Maxwell was a veteran coach, and knew the winning ways of the past.

and Agility

In just the first season, the varsity and JV soccer teams excelled and proved that men's soccer was a worthwhile addition to the athletic program. The varsity team, with a 9-3-1 record and the JV team with a 6-3-2 record took the lead over most of their competitors. Forty players composed the two teams coached by Mr. John Schneider and Mr. Daryel McCarrel. "I was thankful for Mr. McCarrel's assistance," said Schneider. Graduate Omar Prone ('94) assisted with the JV team.

Three senior captains, Scott Hayes,

Kevin Christoffer-son, and Jason Grace led the varsity team, which received the addition of a talented foreign exchange student, Javier Morales ('95), from Columbia.

Although the soccer team was not in a league, it competed with private schools near the Detroit area.

At the conclusion of the season, most valuable varsity player Scott Hayes ('95) and most improved JV players Matt Turner ('96), Brian Bradley ('97), and Pete Eppley ('97) received awards for their achievements.

ounds of a cheering crowd on a cold night drinking hot chocolate and socializing brought to mind only one thing: a varsity football game.

Not even the announcer's voice could be heard over the energetic screams and yells of the crowd on the night of a home game. Led by the cheerleaders, fans really put their all into supporting the varsity players.

Despite their slow start, the team had an excellent season end with a final record of 6-3. "I feel we had a great year and accomplished a lot more than what we started out with. I hope we come back next year and play even better," said Randy Ayotte ('96).

The varsity squad was a young team this season, with a large group of juniors and a few sophomores.

Despite the loss of some key seniors, the team had a strong season. "The best thing about this season was beating Eisenhower 25-0, after losing to them last year. We deserved to win. It helped the team's morale," said Josh Rawlings ('95).

arents and friends encouraged the freshman and JV football teams at both home and away games as they completed excellent seasons on the field and readied themselves to move up to either JV or varsity team.

Early summer practices were one of the changes of high-school football for the freshmen. Long practices and grueling games broke in the amateur players. Their improvement was evident. "These young men could be one of the best football teams ever, if they continue to work," said Coach Dan Hanton.

The junior varsity members spent their season improving for the varsity team next year. All of the young men fine tuned their skills in an effort to win.

The teams worked toward greatness with incredible drive. Despite late nights filled with sore muscles and exhaustion they didn't give up. "Practices were hard, but all the work pays off when the game comes around," said Ed Albers ('98).

xceptional skill, combined with dedication and practice made up the winning ways of the equestrian and golf teams. The equestrian team captured fourth place at the state finals. In addition to this accomplishment, four team members: Larry Brennan ('95), Bret Konkel ('95), Barb Wiseman, and Rebeca McIntyre ('95) received first place honors in their events. McIntyre also earned overall highpoint for the "A" Division.

Ron and Dawn Woolman coached the team for the last two years. Their guidance helped the team greatly. "To be fourth in the state competing against the best of fourteen districts, and only nineteen points from the runner-up position is great," said Coach Ron Woolman.

The golf team had a record of 7-6-1 and finished third place in the MAC Red Tournament and seventh out of twenty-seven teams at the Gil Evans Tournament. "We had a winning season," said Mike Traver ('95) about his final year on the team.

and Action

After summer basketball camps, rough games, and exhausting practices, the women's varsity basketball team developed a sense of unity.

Dedication and hard work were the only ways for the players to achieve success, but it was not all work all the time. "It was fun being at practices. The team members and the coach all became friends," said Maria Garcia ('95). Organizing scrimmages among themselves helped to sharpen their skills and gain an idea of where they stood on the team.

Some team members attended basketball camp in late July. This week-long experience helped improve their dribbling, shooting, and passing techniques. While at camp, they became better acquainted with each other and socialized together in the evenings. "We had a lot of fun together, both on and off the court," said Brenda O'Malley ('95).

ard work and inspiration drove the freshman and JV women's basketball teams to perform to the best of their ability. Physically strenuous practices and games forced the players to gain endurance and skill.

The team members grew closer both on and off the court. Players attended pregame dinners held at each others' houses in order to mentally prepare for the game. They also attended social events together. This friendship outside of practices brought more cooperation during games. "Basketball was really fun. We had to learn to get along with each other on the court," said Jordan Sansom ('98). Attending camps over the summer to improve their ability also drew the players together.

The new freshman team enabled more students to play basketball. "Considering that this was a first year program, I am very pleased with the way things went. The girls played hard and showed tremendous improvement by the end of the season," said Coach Pettingill.

Practice Makes Perfect

ne, two, three, pin! That was the sound of the referee counting off for a pin during a wrestling match. Wrestling participants needed to be in good physical and mental condition. "One of the things I liked best about wrestling were the physical and mental challenges. It prepares you for the struggles of life that you will face as you grow older," said Nick Rigney ('98).

Wrestling was a thinking sport where one had to learn not only how to perform the moves, but also how to get out of an opponent's hold and how then put him in a hold that he can not get out of. "Wrestling is a challenge that too many people will never even try and even fewer people will conquer, but it's still fun," said Jeremy Cristini ('97).

triving For Perfection

I am! Another hit the the mat. The JV and Freshman wrestling teams were off to a winning start.

Teamwork, and enthusiasm played a major part in wrestling, as did physical and mental strength. "We had a good year because the team stayed together and cheered for each other," said Craig Morris ('96).

Wrestling required skill, timing, and determination. The different weight classes ranged from about 110 pounds to about 250 pounds.

During a match, points were awarded for an escape, the reverse of a hold, and the final point was given to the person who pinned their opponent. Then all the points were totaled and whoever had the most points won.

Wrestling also helped athletes' condition for spring sports. "Wrestling helped me prepare for other sports," said Ken Nelson ('97).

Figures Of Excellence

From the first drop of the puck to the final buzzer, the hockey team had a successful season. Long hours of on and off ice practice prepared the team for the challenging season. “I had an excellent time playing for the team for my second year. The competition was great as well as the team’s will to win,” said Kevin Hinton ('96).

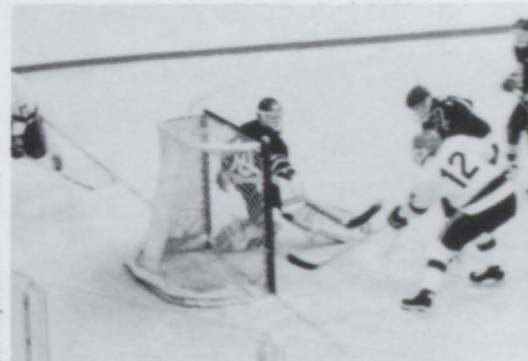

The hockey team participated in the Detroit Metro League, and excelled throughout the season finishing first place in their division.

Senior captains Don Truscott, Matt Warren, and Matt Zito provided leadership during the season.

Physical play and accurate passing played a large role in the hockey team’s attack. “When the team played as one and we got our lines clicking, we really played well,” said Nathan Heier ('97).

The state tournament brought intense preparation. When the buzzer blew and the game began the hockey team was ready and raring to go.

ig that ball! Set it up! Kill it! Digging, setting, and killing were just some of the techniques used to play a good volleyball game.

Being on the volleyball team was fun, but it also took a lot of hard work and practice. "I think being on the varsity volleyball team is both fun and hard work because being a setter means I have to set up my hitters and make a play happen. There is a lot of pressure, but it is fun because I love playing volleyball," said Laura Smith ('96).

Mr. Ron Davey influenced his varsity players and taught them the skills that were needed for a great, successful, and fun season. "Mr. Davey is a very encouraging coach. He always thinks positively and pushes us to be the best that we can be," said Brenda O'Malley ('95).

etting The Standard

et! Spike! Volleyball required concentration and flexibility in conjunction with teamwork and the ability to perform.

Players on the Freshman and JV teams possessed these qualities and necessary for their successful play. "I think the most important aspect of volleyball is working together and playing as a team," said Christine Harrison ('97). Learning to work together required co-operation on everyone's part.

Off the court, players showed their sportsmanship with appropriate conduct and good feelings toward opponents.

Along with the fun times that went into uniting the teams, there were many hours of practice after school and on vacations spent to make them successful. "I feel the long hours of practice going over our game plan for the upcoming matches really paid off and helped us to improve our game," said Dawn Thomas ('97).

pirit and Emotion

ports fans enjoyed the smiling faces of the varsity, JV, and freshmen cheerleaders at all athletic events. The three cheerleading squads began the school year with spirit and style.

Preparation for cheerleading began in the summer. Members attended numerous practices and Cheer Michigan, a cheerleading camp at Camp Nahelu in Ortonville, Michigan.

Being on the cheerleading squad meant more than sporting events. The cheerleaders helped at children's days at Target and Younkers department stores and in coordinating the Scotty Hanton Marathon. "Cheerleading gives you a chance to help out in the community. It feels good to help out with the children," said Jana Gilbert ('95).

A quality coach aided in developing quality cheerleaders. Jenny Dent coached the freshmen squad; Debbie Earnst and Stacy Hesterman coached the varsity and JV squads.

With her eyes on the enthusiastic crowd, Danielle Kearns ('96) cheers with excitement. Kearns is a junior on the varsity squad.

Beams Of Support

After Michigan residents voted to increase the sales tax to six percent, a full spectrum of changes took place.

The school board used the funding to purchase textbooks, add new sports to the athletic program, and reinstate teachers that had been laid off due to cutbacks.

Aside from the government's financial contributions, others in the community also supported the school. Parents who actively participated in the Booster Club and Band Boosters by selling tickets at athletic events and working the refreshment stands aided in the smooth running of these events. "The Booster Club was a way for parents to become involved and support the athletic program," said Jamie Barrett, a parent and former student. Other parents who did not participate in these groups involved themselves by regularly attending games and cheering on the teams.

Academically, parents contributed to their children's success by assisting with homework and meeting with teachers. Their support was evident in the excellent attendance at conferences, which raised the level of cooperation between parents and teachers. In addition, the Parent Advisory Council met bi-monthly to offer suggestions on improving academic and athletic programs.

Local businesses helped ease costs by advertising in the yearbook and in the programs at football, basketball, and hockey games.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Graduates

The right bank can make a difference.

Do you think your friends make an impact on your decisions? Why?

"It would depend on what degree the situation was, but I am usually persuaded by my friends."

—Maria Garcia ('95)

"Yes, but it depends on the situation."

—Angie Moews ('96)

"No. Not really, I think for myself. They give me advice, but I think about it before I make my decision."

—Chris Harrison ('97)

"Yes, because we like to stick together."

—Erin Wilkins ('98)

Colophon

Deciding upon the theme for the 30th volume of Spirit consumed many hours of discussion; "Full Spectrum" eventually emerged as a theme characteristic of the 1994-95 school year with a full spectrum of sports, academics, staff, and, of course, students.

Five yearbook students attended summer journalism/yearbook workshops. Scott Cummings, Julie Esterline, Amy Franchuk, and Hilary Bridge spent a week of their summer at MIPA (Michigan Interscholastic Press Association) in East Lansing; Dana Catlett attended the Herff Jones Yearbook Workshop in Boca Raton, Florida.

The Herff Jones Printing Company in Shawnee Mission printed 1100 copies of Spirit which sold for $36.00 on school picture day and $38.00 and $40.00 thereafter. Spirit contains 232 pages (8 more than the previous volume) to accommodate for new additions to the educational program. Forty seven pages are in four color process with the remaining pages being black and white. Screens and rule lines were used graphically throughout the book.

The custom designed cover is Antique Blue #1079 with custom embossing on a Vibra text material wrapped around a 120 point board. The cover is highlighted with white silk screen and a rainbow foil to enhance the "Full Spectrum" theme. The endsheets are color text crystalline recycled printed with navy ink. The first 48 pages were printed on 110 Allegiance; the remaining pages were printed on 80# Bourdeau Special.

Headlines and caption treatment vary from section to section with the main body copy being in 10 point Times Roman.

The Spirit Staff extends its appreciation to portrait photographer, Mr. Max Beck, and the staff of Josten's Photography Inc. for their promptness in delivering the portrait photos to the school. The staff also extends its appreciation and acknowledges the contributions of team photographer, Mr. Dennis McDonald; activity group photographer, Mr. Max Beck of Josten's Photography; assistant principal/photographer, Mr. Alex Crittenden; Mr. Robert Jechura of Jechura Photography for the senior group picture; and the staff at the Photo Factory for their promptness and cooperation near deadlines. The staff also acknowledges assistant principal/athletic director, Mr. Thomas Rodenbaugh and secretary Denise Raymo for their cooperation with athletic details; activities director, Ms. Pat Knapp; art teacher, Ms. Julie LaBeau for her assistance with the cover design; principal, Mr. James Goldworthy; assistant principal, Mr. Richard Chapman; the office and secretarial staff, and the entire PHN staff for their cooperation. Special thanks goes to Ms. Ann Robinson, Herff Jones plant consultant, for her expertise in overseeing printing details; and finally Herff Jones sales representative, Mr. Tony Noto, for his encouragement and assistance.

Port Huron Northern is a member of (CSPA) Columbia Scholastic Press Association, (MIPA) Michigan Interscholastic Press Association, (GLIPA) Great Lakes Interscholastic Press Association, and (ASPA) American Scholastic Press Association. All four press associations have critiqued Spirit over the past eight years. MIPA has awarded Spirit four Spartan Awards, GLIPA has awarded Spirit one Buckeye Award and several First Place Awards, ASAP has awarded four First Place awards with Special Merit, and CSPA has awarded Spirit two Medalist Awards and several First Place Awards.

Mrs. Evonne L. VanderHeuvel has been the yearbook teacher/adviser the past ten years.

The top sports, entertainment, national, and international stories

"I agree with the caning of Michael Fay. If you break the law, you should pay the price."

—Jon Smith ('95)

Chaotic, yet at times, hopeful summarized 1994's international scene.

When it came to vandalism, the Singapore government felt the penalty should be severe. American Michael Fay faced a caning after pleading guilty to spray painting cars.

Civil war and disease ravaged many countries. Rwanda's Hutu and Tutsi tribes fought a bloody tribal war while a massive cholera epidemic plagued Rwandan refugee camps. So-malians also fought in a civil war of their own while Bosnian Serbs attempted "ethics cleansing" which meant the exterminations of all non-Serbs, Muslim and Croates in that country.

Israeli leader Yitshak Rabin, Shimon Perez and PLO leader, Yasser Arafat received the Nobel Peace Prize for their attempts to resolve the Palestinian/Israeli conflict. Rabin also signed peace accords with Jordan's King Hussein.

Due to fears of too many people and not enough room or money, the UN sponsored a world population conference during September in Cairo, Egypt.

Russia's problems continued while the Chechens fought for their independence.

Mexico had severe economic difficulties. The US debated aiding Mexico's financial downward spiral.

A damaging 7.2 earthquake virtually leveled Kobe, Japan's sixth largest city. An estimated 5,000 died from the effects of the massive tremor.

Revolution, scandal, and shock characterized 1994. CNN and other networks aired the case of superstar O.J. Simpson, an alleged double murderer. O.J. Simpson allegedly stabbed his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman. Simpson, prior to turning himself in, led police on a much publicized and televised chase in his white Ford Bronco.

Susan Smith of Union, South Carolina won the nation's sympathy when she reported her two sons had been kidnapped in a car jacking incident. Nine days after the boys were reported missing, Smith confessed to drowning her children by driving her car into a lake with her boys trapped inside.

Republicans took control of the congress. GOP leaders Newt Gingrich and Robert Dole produced a "Contract with America," a plan that outlined the republican party's interests on issues like welfare and taxes.

President Bill Clinton and his wife, Hillary, attempted to develop a plan for universal health care; however, neither republicans nor democrats approved of the idea. While the first lady, Hillary, was caught up in the Whitewater real estate scandal, President Clinton was accused of sexual harassment by Paula Jones, a former aid to the President.

A costly and damaging earthquake measuring 6.7 on the Richter Scale rocked Southern California while Georgia, Alabama, and Florida saw the worst flooding in that region since the 1920's.

—Barb Wiseman

On strike, locked out or bad attitudes had many athletes and spectators fed up. Ken Griffey Jr., Matt Williams, and Barry Bonds were stopped in their pursuit of Ruth's record to go on a strike that for the first time in 90 years would wipe out the World Series.

The New York Rangers after 54 years took the Stanley Cup on June 14. Then, after a 103 day lockout that started October 1st, NHL players returned to the ice to play a fast 48 games before playoffs.

Tennis player, Jennifer Capriati went for the purple hair and nose ring look and landed in drug rehab. After being stabbed in the back, Monica Seles secluded herself from spectators while Andre Agassi went on to win the US Open.

George Foreman became the heavy weight champion of the world again.

The San Francisco 49ers ran over San Diego in the XXIX Super Bowl.

The World Cup finally opened America's eyes toward soccer. After a tie, a win, and then a loss, the US soccer team fought hard to represent their country. Colombian player, Andres Escobar was murdered for scoring an "own-goal."

Isaih Thomas and Bill Lam-bier of the Detroit Pistons retired. New York Knicks player, Charles Oakley complained until he got an extra $8 million to add to his salary of $2.2 million. Arkansas earned the number one rank in Basketball in the NCAA.

—Amanda Franchuk

Music swept the air waves while movies and TV shows lit up the big screens. Green Day broke into the alternative music scene with "Dookie." "Hold My Hand" was a big hit for Hootie and the Blowfish. Melissa Etheridge sat on top of the contemporary chart for five weeks with "I'm The Only One" while Garth Brooks rounded up his best to sell collectively as "The Hits."

About 350,000 showed up in Saugerties, New York to celebrate Woodstock Two with music, peace, and mud.

Shocking fans, singer and writer of the group Nirvana, Kurt Cobain committed suicide.

"Gumpism," and "Life is like a box of chocolates..." hit the nation when Tom Hanks starred in "Forrest Gump." While some were crying as they watched "Schindler's List" others were at the edge of their seats watching the action packed flick "Speed" starring Keanu Reeves. Others walked out of the theatre ready to belt out "The Lion Sleeps Tonight" after seeing "The Lion King."

Tim Allen topped the charts with the movie "Santa Clause," his book, and his sitcom "Home Improvement."

After leaving "Cheers," Frasier left to start his own four star series.

What a year! The 1995 seniors finally graduated. They walked out the doors for the last time as students. The members of the Class of '95 entered the real world.

Throughout the year, the students showed they were a full spectrum of winners. The areas of academics and athletics carried on the tradition of excellence. The students made time in their schedules to get involved in co-curricular activities. Participation in activities taught students to be more responsible and prepared them for the future.

Even with all of these responsibilities, students found time to have fun. Football games, dances, Mardi Gras, and Snow Extravaganza gave everyone a lasting memory. "The most memorable moments for me this year were the pep assembly and the Mardi Gras games assembly," said Mike Carleton ('95).

From rowdy pep assemblies to wild turkeys in the courtyard, no one had a dull moment. Mardi Gras became more exciting than ever as the Class of '95 narrowly defeated the Class of '96 by two points to win the barrel.

Many changes were evident throughout the school. The addition of many new sports brought about a full spectrum of participation. Additional teachers allowed smaller class sizes and a better learning environment for students because they could get more individual help.

The athletics department had many reasons to be proud. With state ranked hockey, volleyball, and women's tennis teams, the tradition of great athletic teams was carried on all year.

Student Council sponsored many activities throughout the community. The canned food drive, two blood drives, and senior citizen luncheon helped the less fortunate.

The school's address officially changed to Port Huron from Fort Gratiot. The change allowed for a new gymnasium to be built, tennis courts to be put in, and repairs made on the road in front of the school in the future.

The closed campus policy went into effect this year. It caused a great deal of controversy, but turned out to be very effective.

Throughout the year, new policies combined with old traditions to leave the seniors with a full spectrum of memories.
